Idaho Open

By Jay Simonson

James Wei triumphed over 13 other players to win the title of Champion in the 2022 Idaho Open Chess Championship on April 16, 2022. He had a perfect 5.0/5 score which earned him the championship plaque and $200. The 15-year-old Wei was the highest-rated player at the tournament, and his no-loss, no-draw performance at the 2022 Idaho Open shows that his rating is well deserved.

There were no other overall prizes awarded for this five-round Swiss System tournament, directed by veteran tournament director Jay Simonson.

The class prize winners each won $75 and the runner up in each class earned $25. James Wei, who won the championship honors, was the only class A player, so no prizes were awarded for class A. First place class B honors went to Zachary Fritchen of Idaho Falls, and second place was claimed by Niall McKenzie of Pocatello. Bryce Leifeste of Eagle, Idaho's reigning scholastic champion, won first place in class C, with ISU professor Nobel Ang of Pocatello winning second place. Darren Furman of Idaho Falls claimed first place in class D. John Eisenmenger of Idaho Falls won first place in Class E.

Huntington Lysy from Utah would have won second place class E, but he withdrew from the tournament after round four. Raul Villacorta of Rexburg took top honors for the unrated players, and Spencer Flamm from St. Anthony won second place among the five unrated players who battled in this prestigious tournament.

29th Dave Collyer Memorial

Kevin Korsmo

Youth was served during the 29th Dave Collyer Memorial tournament, even though the name on the top of the leader board at the end was a familiar one. IM John Donaldson scored another perfect 5.0/5 to again win the event. Second place was shared by ten-year-old Finnegan Flavin of Wenatchee and Spokane veteran Dave Rowles, both of whom finished with 4.5/5 scores.

Continuing a trend that we've noticed since the Spokane Chess Club reopened last fall, the return to over-the-board (OTB) after nearly two years was swelled by many newcomers and many former players who returned to chess during the pandemic. Most of them trained and played online during the closure, rendering their OTB ratings obsolete. This point was driven home when I had to override 13 alerts while submitting the event to US Chess for rating—nine of the overrides involved players greatly exceeding their expected results.

Foremost among that group was Finnegan Flavin, whose father Devin also outplayed his rating for the event. Finnegan's play over the weekend began with a draw against Donaldson in the Friday night simul, putting him on many people's radars. He started the tournament with an established rating of 887 and scored an upset every round of the event. The only blemish on his record was a second-round draw with Jeremy Yunker, a class A player, and even that result was high on the tourney list of upsets. Finnegan finished the event with a 1307 rating.

He was far from the only newcomer to make his mark. Owen McDevitt, a graduate student at WSU recently transplanted from Vanderbilt sported a provisional rating of 663 entering the event and left with a provisional rating of 1070, nearly matching Finnegan's upsets point for point. McDevitt finished with a score of 4.0/5, including a 2-1 record against class A players in the final three rounds. WSU freshman Brian Lee, an experienced class A player making his Collyer debut, won his first four games before battling Donaldson on board one with the tournament title at stake. These outstanding results overshadowed fine play from youngsters from Montana, the Tri-Cities, and Yakima who also managed to boost their ratings. First-time players Caelan Angell, Andrew Graham, and Garrett Thompson came out of the event with provisional ratings of 1630, 1714, and 1718, respectively. Pocatello's Niall McKenzie saw his established rating climb over 200 points.

The numerous upsets each and every round made the competition for the Jim Waugh biggest upset prizes one of the fierce sidelights of the event. Finnegan Flavin won both of the prizes, although he would only have won the first of those two prizes if provisionally rated players were eligible for the award.

The upset carnage reached the top boards early, with one Expert upended in each of the first three rounds. The top boards, John Donaldson and Viktors Pupols, avoided damage the first day, but each of them had to play lengthy games every round. Three of Donaldson's opponents would flag on time. Pupols had the final game of the first day, finishing off Karl Reutter with three seconds on his clock to one second on Reutter's. Five players concluded the first day's action with perfect 3.0/3 scores: Donaldson, Pupols, Steve Merwin, Lee, and McKenzie.

Sunday morning's round four saw Pupols battle Lee on board two in another lengthy affair, but the younger man prevailed in the resulting time scramble. Meanwhile, Merwin had spent half the night preparing a line to throw at Donaldson that forced the IM to go down significantly on time early in the game. His refutation of the Merwin Gamble (my name) ultimately turned the clock on Merwin, who flagged in a losing position. Rowles, who had taken his customary third-round bye, put an end to McKenzie's perfect score, leaving only Donaldson and Lee with 4.0/4.

The IM prevailed in another lengthy affair to win the tournament. Meanwhile, Rowles battled Andrew Rankin of Helena on board two. Rankin, a provisionally-rated player who played his first OTB tourney at last year's Montana Open (I had the privilege of being his second-round victim), finished the event with an established rating of 1772 that probably understates his true strength. Rowles ground out the victory to reach 4.5/5. Meanwhile, on board three Finnegan battled Viktors in a classic youth versus age matchup, with the youngster defeating the legend to join Rowles in a tie for second.

The class prize winners constitute a typically lengthy list. David Arganian and Michael Cambareri (4.0/5) shared the Expert prize. The class A prizes were split among Lee, Merwin, and Younker. The class B prizes were shared by Neal Bonrud, Griffin Herr, and Rankin with their 3.5/5 scores. That figure also won McKenzie the class C first prize. A four-way tie for second in that class was shared by Jesse Driscoll, Tayseer Khalil, Murlin Varner, and Jeremy Wohl. The class D prizes all went to Spokane chess clubbers. Casey Bruner, another returnee to chess, won first prize, while veteran Patrick Kirlin and high school freshman Arnav Wadikar (another fast-rising youth) took the second prize. Unrated players claimed both prizes in the class E/unrated category. Owen McDevitt (4.0/5) won the section, while Andrew Graham (3.0/5) claimed the second prize.

The event drew 71 participants (including two house players) this year, tying its second highest total. This was the first time the event was played at a hotel. Although the accommodations were nice, the playing hall was stretched to comfortable limits by the turnout. It would not have been able to handle the 79 people who registered. We will be looking for a larger venue next year.

As always, the event was sponsored by the Spokane Chess Club and the Gary Younker Foundation in memory of Dave and Ellen Collyer and Gary Younker. The weekend began with a Friday afternoon blitz tournament that drew 14 players, and then the annual John Donaldson lecture. The ensuing simul was a sign of things to come, with the IM playing over three hours to tackle the 25 players. He won 19 games but lost two and drew four.

Organizers also announced that next year's event, the 30th, will be the final Collyer Memorial. Mark your calendars for the weekend of February 24-26, 2023, to help us send off the tournament in style! Details will be announced in the Fall, but we are interested in making the tourney the biggest and best one ever. Stay tuned.

1.d4 e6 2.Nf3 Nf6 3.c4 d5 4.Nc3 c6 5.e3

I usually don't get much from the opening with this move, but I didn't mind having a drawish position against a higher-rated opponent.

5...Nbd7 6.Qc2 Bd6 7.Bd3 0-0 8.0-0 e5
9.cxd5 cxd5 10.Nb5 Bb8 11.dxe5 Nxe5
12.Nxe5 Bxe5 13.Nd4

I played this because I was worried about 13...Bxh2+ and wanted to be able to bring my knight to f3 to defend against mate on h2, but it turns out this is unnecessary because after 13.Bd2 Bxh2+ 14.Kxh2 Ng4+ 15.Kg1 Qh4 White has 16.Qc7.

13...Bd7 14.Bd2 Rc8 15.Bc3 Bxd4
16.exd4 Qb6

With the idea of playing 17...Bb5 trying to trade off White's best minor piece.

17.Rfe1?!

17.a4 was a stronger way to meet Black's 17...Bb5 idea.

17...Bb5 18.Bf5 Bd7 19.Bd3

Played to see if Black was interested in a draw.

19...Rfe8

Obviously he is not.

20.f3

The computer doesn't like this move because it allows Black to play Bb5 again, forcing either an exchange of bishops or a repetition, but Black already made it clear that he is not interested in a draw.

20...Rxe1+ 21.Rxe1 Re8?!

With the rooks traded, White's leftover pieces are more active than Black's giving White a small advantage. The computer once again prefers 21...Bb5.

22.Rxe8+ Bxe8 23.Qe2 Qe6?!

Black allows White to enter a favorable endgame in which White's two bishops will dominate the board whereas Black will struggle to find good squares for his minor pieces and be unable to activate his king.

30.Kf2 a6

All of Black's pawns are on the same color square as his bishop and he has moved his knight three times in the last five moves and still has not found a good home for it.

31.Ke3 Ne7 32.Bd6 Nc6 33.g5 Bd7 34.h4 Be8 35.Bc2 Na7 36.Bc5 Nc6 37.b4?!

This allows Black's knight access to c4. At the moment it doesn't seem like Black can get it there, but there is a tricky way to do it, which Black misses. 37. Kf4 Ne7 38. Bxe7 Kxe7 is better, when White has been able to trade his bishop for Black's knight at a favorable time, similar to what happens in the game.

37...b5

37...b6! 38. Bd6 (38.Bxb6 Nxb4 39.Bd1 Bb5 and Black has activated his pieces.) 38...Na7 39.Be5 Nb5 40.Bb3 Na3 and the knight makes it to c4.

38.a4?

Throwing away the entire advantage! Almost any other reasonable move keeps White's edge.

Position after 38.a4

38...Ne7??

Black misses his opportunity and allows White to trade his dark-squared bishop for Black's knight into an easily won ending. 38...bxa4 39.Bxa4 Ne7! 40.Bxe7 (40.Bxe8+ [40.Bc2 Nf5+] Kxe8 41.Kf4 Nf5 is better for Black since his knight has targets and all of his pawns are on the opposite color as White's bishop, so White would have to play 41.Bxe7 and the resulting king and pawn ending is drawn) 40...Bxa4 Black has forced White into an opposite-colored bishop ending which should be an easy draw.

39.Bxe7 Kxe7 40.axb5!

Not 40.a5? when White cannot break through.

40...axb5?!

40...Bxb5 was better, though still losing.

41.Bd3

Black's two big problems are that his pawns are all on the same color as his bishop and White has targets on both sides of the board (b5 and g6), which cannot both be defended for long. The winning plan involves putting Black in zugzwang by forcing him to either give up a pawn, allow White a passed pawn, or allow White's king to advance decisively.

41...Bd7 42.h5

Position after 42.h5

42...gxh5

If Black tries to hold tight with 42...Be8 then 43.h6 Kd6 44.Kf4 and we have the zugzwang I mentioned earlier. Black cannot move his bishop without either losing the b5-pawn or allowing 45.Bxg6, and if he moves his king then White plays 45.Ke5 and wins.

43.Bxh7 h4 44.Kf4??

This natural move allows black to save the game! The saving move is tough to find however, and fortunately my opponent missed it in time trouble.

Position after 44.Kf4

44...h3??

44...e5+! 45.dxe5 d4! The problem is White cannot stop both the d- and h-pawns without giving up his g5-pawn. The critical lines are 46.Bd3 Kf7 47.Bf1 (47.e6+ Bxe6 48.Bxb5 h3 49.Kg3 Bf5) 47...Kg6 (not 47...h3? 48.Kg3 and White will be able to play f4 and defend his g5-pawn) 48.e6 (If White moves his bishop, then Black will just repeat with 48...Kf7 when White has nothing better than to play 49.Bf1 again anyway) 49...Bxe6 49.Bxb5 Bf5 50.Be8+ Kg7 51.b5 d3 52.b6 d2 53.Ba4 Bc8 54.Ke3 (54.b7 Bxb7 55.Kg4 h3 56.Kxh3 Bxf3) 54...Bb7 55.Kf2 Kg6 56.f4 Kf5 57.Bc2+ Be4 58.Bxe4+ Kxe4 59.Ke2 h3 60.b7 h2 61.b8=Q d1=Q+ 62.Kxd1 h1=Q+ and this is drawn since White's king can't find cover. After the text move, Black doesn't get any more chances.

45.Kg3 Kf7 46.f4 Kg7 47.Bd3 Kf7 48.Bf1 e5 49.dxe5 d4 50.Bd3 Kg7 51.f5 1-0

Tournament dates and details are subject to changes.

On Sunday April 10, I played in the Spring Team Championship in Salt Lake City, Utah. This was my first-ever team chess tournament. Leo Wang and I formed a team to play in this event. Since we are both from Singapore, we decided to call ourselves “Team Singapura.” (Singapura is the Malay name for Singapore).

It all started with a phone call. More precisely, it started with a message on chess.com. On Monday April 4, I received a message on chess.com from Alex, Leo’s dad, asking me to give him a call. My first thought was, “Wow, what’s going on? Is there a chess emergency?” What would count as a chess emergency anyway? Maybe Leo qualified for the Candidates Tournament, and needs some last-minute help with the semi-Slav? But then, why would he call me? There’s got to be any number of stronger players out there...

My curiosity piqued, I called Alex, and it was indeed an emergency of a kind. Leo wanted to play in the Spring Team Championship in Salt Lake City

Crash And Burn In Salt Lake City

Nobel Ang

on Sunday, and they couldn’t find anyone to partner up with him. Would I, a compatriot, be willing to wage battle on the sixty-four squares for the glory of Singapura? I told Alex to give me twenty-four hours to think it over. I had a prior commitment on Saturday night, so playing in the tournament would entail waking up very early on Sunday and driving two and a half hours to Salt Lake City—probably not the best recipe for a great tournament performance. But twenty-four hours later, I found myself saying yes to Alex, not because I am a patriot, but because I find it hard to say no to playing chess, even if it would mean sacrificing sleep. Furthermore, I had also heard that there are some strong players in Salt Lake City (there are a few players rated around 2100, and then there’s GM Kayden Troff. But Troff probably wouldn’t play in a tournament for class players), and I wanted to see how I stack up against them.

And so it was that I found myself in Salt Lake City early on an April Sunday morning, playing four rounds of G60 with 5-second increment. I had a strong start. In the first round, I squared off against Tinh Son Nguyen, rated around 2100 and one of the strongest players in the area. I had the black pieces, and mounted the Berlin defense against his Ruy Lopez. Right from the beginning, he put a ton of pressure on my position, and had the upper hand for much of the game. At one point, his f- and e-pawns advanced all the way to his six and seventh ranks respectively, and my rook and king were stuck on the back rank frantically practicing birth control, attempting to prevent the birth of a new white queen. But then I was somehow able to get my dark-square bishop outside of my pawn chain and deep into his territory, which somehow caused him to blunder away a pawn, and I ended up creating a queening threat of my own with my f-pawn. I still had to give up an exchange (my rook for his bishop and e-pawn) in order to stop him from queening. But from that point, I was able to steer things into a rook versus bishop-and-two-pawns endgame, and play him to a draw.

This was definitely a chess lifetime achievement: It’s the first time I’ve played a 2000+ player and not lost. A couple of people came up to congratulate me on my draw, and then went on their merry ways... wait what? Shouldn’t there be a shaft of light shining down from high above, accompanied by a pair of chess angels trumpeting my great achievement? Isn’t this all a bit anticlimactic?

Nevertheless, as you can imagine, I was riding a huge wave of confidence. In the next round, I beat a 1400 player.

*Nobel Ang (L) squaring off against Tinh Son Nguyen.

But then lack of sleep caught up with me (that is my excuse, at any rate), and things took a sudden downturn. I lost the next two games, one against a 954, the other against a 1305. I can at least say that the 954 was severely underrated; after the game, he told me that due to his busy work schedule, he rarely plays OTB tournaments, but plays online a lot, and that his online rating is much higher than his OTB rating. He didn't tell me how much higher, but I would estimate that his true playing strength is at least around 1500.

On the other hand, my game against the 1305 was a complete fiasco. I played the black side of the Scotch. Things started out alright, and I was even able to threaten checkmate with a queen-bishop battery on the h1-a8 diagonal. But then—and I'm still too shell-shocked even now to fully explain how it happened—I ended up falling for some stock mating threat, and resigned on move 23 in the face of an unavoidable mate in one.

Objectively speaking, this was definitely not a great tournament performance. I finished 1.5/4; both my losses were against lower-rated players, which caused me to lose a chunk of rating points (please don't ask me how many). But there is that one bright spot: I drew a 2100 player for the first time in my life. Which means that I am capable of playing at that level, I just have to figure out how to play that well consistently. Easier said than done, I know, but when has chess ever been easy?

Leo, on the other hand, had a great

tournament, finishing with a score of 3.0/4. He vanquished his opponents quite effortlessly, and picked up a bunch of rating points in the process. Well, at least one Singaporean had a good tournament that day. 😊

All in all, though, I feel that I had a fun and informative tournament. Actually, “informative” is not quite the word I’m looking for here; How do you describe an experience which, although not totally pleasant, was nevertheless a useful learning and training experience, which then informs your future experiences?

Hmmm... actually, maybe “informative” is the right word here, we just have to understand it in a different way from the way it’s normally understood.

I see that I’m starting to lapse into a pseudo-linguistic ramble here, so I should probably sign off now. But before I do, I want to say one more thing: Credit for this fun tournament must be given to the TD, Ben Watanabe. Ben is an 11th grader and is already directing tournaments. What was I even doing in 11th grade? Definitely not directing tournaments, that much is for sure.

Inland Empire Open

Kevin Korsmo

Spokane's oldest tournament, the Inland Empire Open (first played in 1954), returned after a COVID-required three-year absence on April 23-24, 2022. Eighteen players took part, with the top third comprised of a tightly grouped cluster of class A players trailing expert Michael Cambareri in the initial rankings. Throw in two strong unrated players and a pair of underrated provisional 1300 players, and the event was uncommonly competitive for its size.

Second seed Brian Lee, a WSU freshman from Napavine, continued his strong play in Spokane events by sweeping the field to win with a 5.0/5 score. Lee had scored 4.0/5 in the Collyer Memorial in February, losing only to IM John Donaldson on board one in the final round. His success has put him on the edge of obtaining an Expert rating.

Although upsets were few and limited, the play through every round was generally tightly contested. Indeed, the only draw of the entire tournament occurred in the fourth round on the bottom board—a draw by repetition to save a losing position. An oddity of the third round was that the bottom two boards were the last to finish Saturday night.

The first day's action had resulted in two perfect scores from Lee and third seed Brad Bodie. The two met on board one to open the second day's action. Brian topped Brad and moved on to defeat Spokane veteran Dave Rowles in the final round. Rowles had defeated Cambareri in the fourth round and won the biggest upset prize.

Bodie scored the sole 4.0/5 to win the second prize. The class A prize was shared by Rowles and James Stripes with scores of 3.5/5. The class B/C prize was won by Jeremy Burnett (3.0/5). The class D/unrated prize was won by newcomer Dakota Wickel (3.0/5). He had arrived in Spokane a month earlier and turned his online chess into an over the board experience, earning a 1695 provisional rating in the process. Second in the class (2.5/5) was shared by Owen McDevitt and Arnav Wadikar, two underrated players who continue to move up the ratings listing.

[Brian Lee]

This was my most interesting game of the tournament, despite the fact that my opponent blundered very early. Even though the game was kind of one-sided, my opponent put up a good fight and there were many interesting and instructive moments.

1.d4 Nf6 2.Nf3 g6 3.c4 Bg7 4.Nc3 0-0 5.e4 d6 6.Be2 e5 7.dxe5 dxe5 8.Qxd8 Rxd8 9.Bg5 Re8 10.0-0 c6 11.Nxe5 Nxe4 12.Nxe4 Bxe5

Position after 12...Bxe5

This position has occurred several times with White scoring quite well after 13.f4 and 13.Nd6, but here my opponent blundered.

13.Nf6+??

Missing my 14th move.

13...Bxf6 14.Bxf6 Nd7

This attacks the bishop and also blocks Rd8+ making 15...Rxe2 a threat.

15.Rxd7 Bxd7

White's dark-square bishop looks pretty strong, but he doesn't have enough compensation.

16.Bf3 Re6 17.Bc3 Rae8 18.h4 h6 19.h5 g5 20.Rd1 Bc8 21.Bg4

This doesn't change the computer's evaluation but is probably just a mistake since White does not want to trade pieces.

21...R6e7 22.Bf3?!

Best is 22.Bxc8 but trading pieces doesn't seem very appealing.

22...g4 23.Rd6

Position after 23.Rd6

23...Re6?!

There is no reason not to take the bishop. I looked at this briefly but when I saw 24.Rxh6 threatening mate I dismissed it thinking it was simpler to trade rooks. Normally it is a good idea to avoid complications when you are already winning, but in this case, this was just laziness on my part. White has nothing after 23...gxf3 24.Rxh6 Re1+ (Or even simply 24...f6) 25.Kc2 Bf5+ 26.Kb3 Bh7-+

24.Rxe6 Bxe6 25.Bd1 c5 26.Bd2 Kg7 27.g3 b6

Here and on the three previous moves it was slightly stronger to take on c4 but I wanted to keep my pawn on g4.

28.b3 f5 29.Bc2 Bd7

With the intention of play 30...Rf8 and 31...Be8 winning the h-pawn. It is important that Black takes the h-pawn because it is hard to break through without doing so. It was stronger, however, to play 29...Bf7 when although Black loses his f-pawn, he can capture White's h-pawn; 30.Bxf5 Bxh5 31.Bc3+ Kg8 32.Bd2 Re2 33.Bxh6 Rxf2 should be an easy win. I thought I could create a situation where I could win the h-pawn and keep my f-pawn, but the more I thought about this, I realized it was more difficult than I thought.

30.Be3 Rxe3!

If I continued with my plan 30...Rf8 then after 31.Bf4 Be8 32.Bd6 Rf7 33.Be5+ Kg8 it is difficult to win the h-pawn without giving up either my h-pawn or my f-pawn. I realized this and came to the conclusion that it was best to return the exchange and transition into a bishop ending where I can easily scoop up the h-pawn and win. The computer surprisingly agrees. At first 30...Rxe3 is not one of its top three choices, but once you show it the move it realizes how bad White's position is and it becomes its top choice by a pretty significant margin.

31.fxe3 Kf6 32.Kd2

32.e4 f4! 33.gxf4 g3 34.e5+ Ke7 35.Be4 Bh3-+

32...Bc6 33.a3 a5 34.Kc3 Be4 35.Bxe4

The king and pawn ending is an easy win, but White is losing anyway.

35...fxe4 36.b4 a4 37.b5 Kg5 38.Kd2 Kxh5 39.Ke2 Kg5 40.Kf2 h5 41.Kg2 h4 42.Kh2 hxg3+ 43.Kxg3 Kh5 44.Kg2 Kh4 45.Kh2 g3+ 46.Kg1!

Position after 46.Kg1

I was playing pretty fast since I knew I was winning and completely missed this move. It doesn't change anything, but Black has to find the right idea(s) to win the game.

46...g2!

Sacrificing a pawn to obtain opposition. Another winning idea is 46...Kh5 47.Kh1 Kg5 48.Kg1 Kh4 and Black has successfully triangulated.

47.Kh2 g1Q+ 48.Kxg1 Kg3

“EN MASSE”

(STANCHIONS BUCKLED)

Karen Schmidt

I planned a weekend trip to my sister’s house in Tacoma around the April 30 Washington State Elementary Chess Championships. So, I bussed from Seattle to Tacoma on Friday, April 29, and enjoyed a relaxing day out in the country with her, the dog, two cats, and the chickens—while mentally gearing up for the tournament on Saturday at the Tacoma Convention Center.

I was looking forward to seeing Seattle’s Detective Cookie (who runs an inner-city chess program for kids) and several other “chronic volunteers” whom I have gotten to know over the past year. When I arrived at the Convention Center, I got directions as to where to go to check in, and then was directed to the fifth floor. When I walked into the exhibition hall at 8:00 AM, I just about fell over after seeing the enormity of the room... and the 800 chess boards, with the pieces still in Ziplock bags. Rather than hunt down the tournament director and ask him what he wanted me to do, I just started setting up pieces. The tournament was scheduled to start at 9:30 AM. At first, I was the only volunteer setting up the pieces, and I got really fast at setting up pieces with both hands. I do remember thinking there was no way we (I?) would get them all set up by 9:30 AM.

I had a passing thought that maybe the kids could just set up their own pieces... but with hundreds of players between kindergarten and sixth grade, the probability of backwards kings and queens was just too great. About 9:00 AM, I noticed that a few others in “VOLUNTEER” t-shirts had joined me in my task. Somehow, we finished in time.

My “real job” turned out to be helping Detective Cookie again with the security detail. I prefer to call it the parent control detail. (Later that day a friend texted and asked me whether I meant controlling the kids or the parents, and it was obvious he was not familiar with gigantic chess tournaments. “The parents,” I replied.)

Detective Cookie and I were stationed out in front of the three sets of double doors leading into the exhibition hall. Thankfully there were stanchions setting up a border in front of the hall, kind of like a no-fly zone in a war. As round one approached, about 1400 kids and at least 1000 parents and siblings pressed up against the ribboned stanchions, awaiting the go-ahead signal to rush in, en masse.

Parents were allowed to accompany their kids into the hall before each of the five rounds to help them find their table, board, and the correct side (black/white) of the table. Then the parents were asked to leave so that the games could begin. Some of them took their sweet time leaving. After announcements were made from the stage and the double doors closed, the games began.

And at this point our “real job” really began. Chess parents can be pushy, wily, and very determined about getting into the hall while the games are in progress. They are also very creative about why they alone should be allowed to go in. But frankly, it would be absolute chaos if we let 1000 parents pop in for a minute “just to take a picture of my son playing his game,” or “just to give my daughter her water bottle,” and so on. We had to be ruthless about telling them that parents are not allowed in the hall during the games.

Round one and its aftermath were the craziest. Approximately five minutes after the round started, a steady stream of children came out all three doors, having already finished their blitz, bullet, and four-move checkmate games. One would think that at such a huge venue, parents would have instructed their children where to find them when they finished their games. But no. We had quite a few boys and girls who had no idea where mom/dad was when they emerged from the hall. Thankfully there were three or four convention center staffers helping us out, and they would cruise the lobby with child in tow looking for the parents. One staffer in particular had a “voice that carried”—an even more commanding voice than Detective Cookie’s—and she was marvelous at barking orders. “Let’s go kids, right this way, go find your parents” was pretty much the mantra throughout the day.

We had our most shocking moment of the day during round two, when a hysterical dad blew past all three of us shouting “My daughter is missing!!” The round was about a half hour underway (rounds lasted an hour), and he shot into the tournament hall hollering this refrain over and over. We were speechless for several seconds, and then Detective Cookie and the staffer went in after him. It turned out that his daughter was not missing; she was playing her chess game. His shouting interrupted a lot of games and distracted numerous players. Who knows how many pieces were dropped or games lost at this point? We never figured out why he was in such a state. My own theory was that maybe she had finished round one in five minutes, and the dad couldn't believe she was still inside after half an hour in round two. (And obviously he had not arranged any meet-up point after her game ended.)

The second weirdest incident was the dad who went ballistic when Detective Cookie informed him that he couldn't go into the hall during the round. I was dealing with other situations at the time—and learned later that he had blown a fuse, including swearing at her profusely. Much later in the day, Detective Cookie had a little personal chat with him in the lobby about his earlier behavior. I would have loved to be the proverbial fly on the wall for that one.

The TDs and the volunteer team did an outstanding job, and I don't think I have ever seen a better organized tournament—especially one of this size. There was a back computer room with several volunteers who input the results after each round, magically transforming them into the pairings for the next round. The judges who roamed the hall during the games also did a great job dealing with the raised hands and numerous questions. All-in-all, the players were extremely well-behaved and had a wonderful day. Most importantly, they had a lot of fun.

I realize that I have highlighted a few of the “parental bad behavior” incidents here, but I want to emphasize that the great majority of the parents were patient, understanding, and followed the rules. This tournament may have been overwhelming for many of them—especially for first-timers—and probably overwhelming for many of the younger players. As Detective Cookie said in a text to me afterwards, “We want to give many thanks to the parents who understand and follow the rules. We also give thanks to the parents who have conversations with their kids about a location for them to meet after they finish their chess games... Remember, this is about the kids, not about you. Let's all enjoy and have fun. We are all winners at the end.”

This day brought back many good memories from my own “chess mom” days at tournaments. I believe that chess in general benefits kids (and adults) of all ages in many ways, including: patience, concentration, looking at all options, deciding on the best course of action, and good sportsmanship.

I'll be happy to volunteer at this event every year in the future.

Although I do recall asking after round one if it was too early in the day to have a drink.

INTERMAT

Team WA Wins 31st Event Washington vs British Columbia

JOSH SINANAN

The 31st Annual WA vs BC Internat ended in a close 29-23 victory for Team WA! The Washington vs British Columbia International Scholastic Chess Match, known informally as the Internat, was hosted online via chess.com for the third consecutive year due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic. All 26 players from each team, two in each grade level, played their games from home via chess.com with Zoom monitoring. To accommodate the players, parents, and team captains, two virtual “team rooms” and a “playing hall” were created using Zoom’s Breakout Room feature. This allowed for a quiet playing area in which players were monitored during their games via Zoom with webcam on and mic muted. Meanwhile in the team rooms, captains and players met to kibitz and analyze the match games in progress.

Team WA played white on all boards in the first round and obtained a strong 17-9 lead due to several key victories in grades K-9! Especially notable were the clean 2-0 sweeps in kindergarten (Daniel + Chen), second grade (Ted + Michael L.), third grade (Vidip + Michael X.), fifth grade (Yiding + Alexander), and ninth grade (Edward + Daniel)! Historically, Team WA has done well in grades K-6, but struggled in the high school grades. With a key two-point knockout by the ninth graders and two clutch mini-upset draws by Ojas Kandhare (grade 10) and George King (grade 12), Team WA was able to fix its major weakness from previous years. Many players on Team WA had played just last weekend in the Barber + Rockefeller Qualifier Tournaments, which no doubt helped them prepare for this tough match. In the team match format, playing hard in every game helps the team, and each move is important.

Notable upset victories were achieved by Lucas Liu (grade four), Abhay Sankar (grade eight), Edward Cheng (grade nine), Daniel Wang (grade nine), and WFM Anne-Marie Velea (grade 11), Team WA’s top player. Especially impressive was Alexander Yang’s comeback win despite dropping a bishop on move 13! Four Washington players drew their games in the first round: Samarth Bharadwaj, Varin Nallabothula, Ojas Kandhare, and George King. In Kandhare-Qiu P., Ojas sacrificed a bishop and then a rook to force a perpetual check against a higher-rated opponent! In King-Shinn, George held a space advantage throughout the game and steered the game to a level rook ending, securing a solid draw for Team WA!

In the second round, Team WA was first to score with two quick victories by our kindergarten phenoms Daniel and Chen! Team BC struck back with two surprising upset victories in grade one and nearly swept the high school grades. In fact, Team BC dropped only 1.5 points in grades 9-12 thanks to a draw by Edward Cheng and a huge win by Aditya Singh in a game in which his opponent played the Barnes Opening (1.f3 2.Kf2?!). Overall, Team WA defended well with the black pieces and launched several well-timed counterattacks to rack up the points in grades two-six, with notable wins scored by Ted + Michael L. (grade two), Michael X. (grade three), Lucas (grade four), Yiding + Alexander (grade five), and Austin (grade seven). In grade ten, Team WA’s Brandon Peng held a nearly four-point advantage on the black side of a Sicilian Grand Prix Attack, but couldn’t finish off the slippery Peter Qiu from Team BC. However, it was his teammate from the Lakeside High School chess team, Aditya Singh (grade 12), who picked up the slack and took down Team BC’s second highest-rated player, Jungmin Shinn, in a completely wild game that saw Aditya sacrifice a knight on the kingside to rip open White’s poorly placed king! Aditya’s huge victory propelled Team WA to 27 points and secured the match victory! Despite the match already being decided on paper, numerous Team WA players and captains Chouchan and Valentin stuck around till the very end to analyze the games and cheer on their teammates. A short closing ceremony concluded the day’s festivities, wrapping up just before 6:00 PM.

Special congratulations to our 2022 Team Washington All Stars, each of whom scored 1.5 or two points from two games: Daniel Yun, Chen Yuan, Ted Wang, Michael Lin, Vidip Kona, Michael Xiong, Lucas Liu, Yiding Lu, Alexander Yang, Austin Liu, Abhay Sankar, and Edward Cheng!

It was a pleasure for the captains to analyze games with the players and follow the match games while keeping tabs on how everyone was doing. Congratulations to the players from both teams on an exciting and close match once again! Special thanks to BC Captains Michael Lo and Eric Gu, WA Captains Chouchanik Airapetian and Valentin Razmov, and to our amazing TDs Stephen Wright and Josh Sinanan for all their hard work in setting up this online Internat. Since no travel was required, and the match took place across both WA and BC, the organizers from both teams decided to co-host this year’s Internat. It truly was a collaborative effort!

Thanks go to all the players and parents for their patience and flexibility with the online format under the circumstances. We look forward to continuing this great tradition, hopefully in-person again, for many years to come!

1.e4 e5 2.Nf3 Nf6 3.Nxe5 Nc6

My opponent played the Stafford Gambit, which was surprising since I was expecting a Scandinavian.

4.Nxc6 dxc6 5.d3

The main move in order to solidify with Be2 and then castling, staying up the pawn.

5...Bc5 6.Be2 h5

6...Ng4 7.Bxc4 Qh4 is another variation that gives more attacking opportunities for Black.

7.h3 Qd4 8.0-0 Qd6 9.Bf3

Here I played Be4 in order to threaten e5 with the fork followed by Re1 in order to apply pressure, but I completely ignored ...Ng4.

9...Ng4

Position after 9...Ng4

10.e5!

The only saving move here in order to divert the queen since taking with the pawn or bishop will open up the h-file for a clear attack. 10.Bxc4 hxg4 11.e5 Qg6

10...Nxe5 11.Re1 Be6 12.Nc3

Here I played Nc3 instead of grabbing the pawn on h5 since I didn't want to allow any attacking play for Black on the kingside.

12...Nxf3+ 13.Qxf3 0-0-0 14.Be3

I decided to offer a trade of dark-squared bishops here, because his bishop was very active and could be crucial for his kingside attack in the future.

14...Bxe3 15.Rxe3 g5

Going for the ...g4 break to open up the h-file.

16.Ne4 Qb4 17.Qf6!

This was a crucial move here since it applies pressure on the g5-pawn, while defending b2, and stopping ...f5 from kicking out my knight.

17...Rhg8 18.a3 Qb5 19.Nd2 Rg6 20.Qe5

I offered a queen trade here since the endgame looked more promising for me.

[Neeraj Harish]

Before this game while I was checking the pairings, I saw that Washington was higher-rated on grades K-7, but were underdogs in the higher grades. Assuming all results are accurate to rating, to win the match it would mean Washington had to win sixth grade to win the match.

1.e4 e6 2.d4 b6

Going into the game I was not familiar with this opening but, I got an advantage quickly.

3.Bd3 Bb7 4.Nf3 Nf6

4...c5 is the main line and the move I expected him to play.

5.Qe2

5.Nc3 runs into 5...Bb4 and White is better, though there is some pressure Black has on the center.

5...d5

This move looked weird to me because Black played ...b6, ...Bb7 and then blocks his powerful bishop with ...d5. 5...c5 here this is not as good as after 6.d5± Qe2 is eyeing the black king.

6.e5

Now White has a very good version of the French. In the French, Black usually wants to play ...Bc8-a6 in one go and trade of his bad bishop. In this case, Black has already wasted a tempo with ...Bb7 and he cannot play ...Ba6 anyway because of Qe2.

6...Nfd7

6...Ne4 7.Nbd2± and White is doing very well (7.0-0 c5± was a little worrying for me, though the engines say that 7.0-0 is the strongest move in that position).

7.c3 c5 8.h4!? h6 9.Be3 Nc6 10.a3 a6 11.b4

I had seen a similar idea in the French Advanced Variation to try and block the queenside, though it is not as great here. 11.h5± is stronger as it gains space on the kingside and Black cannot create anything on the queenside.

11...c4 12.Bc2 b5 13.Nbd2 Be7?!

The bishop is no better on e7 than it is on f8. At some point, White will play Nh2, Qg4 and g7 will be a problem. 13...a5 was better as the bishop might not need to move from f8 at all 14.0-0 Nb6± and Black is close to equalizing.

14.h5 a5 15.0-0

Position after 15.0-0

15...a4??

Now Black has no counterplay and White can freely roll on the kingside. 15...Nb6

Black has to keep the tension on the queenside as that is where his source of counterplay is. 16.Nh2 Na4 and Black is ok.

16.Nh2+- Qc7 17.f4 f5?!

17...0-0-0 is a better defense but White is still dominating after 18.f5 Rdg8 19.Ng4+.

18.exf6

18.g4+- was even stronger, but my move still wins.

18...Nxf6 19.Bg6+ Kd7 20.Ng4 Raf8 21.f5

Now White crashes through.

21...e5 22.Nxe5+ Nxe5 23.Bf4 Kd8 24.dxe5 Ne8 25.Nf3!

Black is devoid of counterplay, so instead of trying to cash in immediately, it is best for white to bring all the pieces to the party.

25...Bc8 26.g4 Qb6+ 27.Kg2 Nc7 28.Nd4 Bd7 29.Rae1

Now every one of the white pieces is developed and well positioned. Ten out of ten times when you have all your pieces in the attack, there will be a tactical opportunity.

29...Be8

29...Kc8 30.f6+- comes anyway.

30.f6! gxf6 31.exf6 Bxf6 32.Bxc7+ Kxc7 33.Ne6+ Kb8 34.Nxf8 Rxf8 35.Bxe8 Qb7 36.Qe6 d4+ 37.Bc6

Now the bishop on f6 is lost as well.

2022 Washington Senior Championship

Josh Sinanan

The 2022 Washington Senior Championship took place in person at the Orlov Chess Academy in Redmond over Easter weekend April 15-17. Veteran chess warriors from throughout Washington State were represented in the modest eight-player field, from locales including Shoreline, Bellevue, Kirkland, Seattle, Mineral, and Edmonds! The event was hosted by the Washington Chess Federation and organized by President Josh Sinanan. PNWCC Board Member and Chess Dad Vijay Sankaran and WCF Vice President/Northwest Chess Publisher Duane Polich tag-teamed to direct the five-round tournament over the course of two-and-a-half days.

FM John Readey, a retired software engineer from Seattle, emerged victorious with an undefeated 4.5 points from five games, allowing only a single draw against fellow FIDE Master William Schill in the third round. John's peak US Chess rating was well over 2400 in the mid 90's, though these days he prefers to keep his skills sharp with blitz chess! For his victory, John receives the title of 2022 Washington State Senior Champion and a $750 travel stipend from the WCF to attend the 2022 Irwin National Tournament of Senior State Champions. Congratulations John! No doubt the strong blitz group of FM John Readey, the late FM Ignacio Perez, NM David Levine, and US Chess Expert Fritz Scholz, which has met regularly at various locations in the greater Seattle area for many years, is a major reason that they all continue to play at such a high level.

FM William Schill II from Seattle finished in second place a full point back with 3.5 points, conceding three draws in the final three rounds. Many players, including Schill, were still adjusting to the long games and wearing off the rust after more than two years of inactivity. Rich LaVoice from Kirkland captured U2000 honors with three points. For Shoreline's James Hamlett IV, it was certainly meant "to be," as he won the U1700 prize with one point! Henry Louie, originally from Sitka (Alaska) and now living in Mineral (Washington) near the Pierce/Lewis county line, won the U1400 prize thanks to a hard-fought draw against Bellevue's Paul Harwood in the fourth round. Congratulations to the winners, and many thanks to all who contributed to this fantastic event!

1.Nf3 Nf6 2.d4 d5 3.Bf4

Dave and I have played countless blitz games with each other, but don't remember him ever playing the London before. I guess he was looking to avoid any advance preparation.

3...c5 4.e3 Nc6 5.c3 Qb6 6.Qc1

6.Qb3 c4 7.Qc2 Bf5 8.Qc1 is seen more frequently. Black gets a tempo to play ...Bf5, but takes pressure off White's center.

I was expecting something like: 9.Be2 Nb4 10.0-0 Bd3 11.Qd1 Qa6 12.Bxd3 Nxd3 13.Bg5 Nxb2 14.Qb3 Na4, when it's quite complicated, but the computer evaluates as 0.0

Lakeside Team Shines at High School Nationals

Josh Sinanan, Lakeside Chess Coach

For many scholastic chess players, 2022 marked the return to in-person national events organized by US Chess. The National High School K-12 Championship held April 8-10, 2022 in Memphis, Tennessee, was first up on the docket, attracting a strong attendance of 1060 chess players in grades K-12. For me and the Lakeside team, it felt great to return to live in-person competition after two years of this event being hosted online. We (Lakeside) were fortunate to be able to send 12 players to the event, spanning grades 6-12: Arnab Bablani (Grade 6), Christopher Peng (Grade 7), Anjali Walsh (Grade 9), Stuart Bushfield (Grade 9), Daniel Wang (Grade 9), Sophie Szeto (Grade 10), Rishi Lakshminarayanan (Grade 10), Brandon Peng (Grade 10), Eric Zhang (Grade 10), Sophie Tien (Grade 11), Michael Nelson (Grade 12), and Aditya Singh (Grade 12).

The talented Lakeside team, a perennial top-ten finisher at Nationals in past years, was a bit more dispersed this year, with only two players in the ultra-competitive Championship section (Eric Z. and Sophie T.), two solid teams in the U1900 (Aditya S., Brandon P., Rishi L., Sophie S., and Michael N.) and U1600 (Daniel W., Christopher P., Stuart B., and Arnab B.) sections, as well as a free agent (Anjali W.) going solo in the U1200 division. During the Lakeside Master Sessions leading up to Nationals, players focused on solving challenging tactical puzzles, working through intricate positional and strategic exercises as a group, and of course playing countless blitz and bughouse games to sharpen their skills. The team had good momentum heading into Nationals with Lakeside having recently triumphed in the Metro League, which was held online this year.

Unlike in past years before Nationals, the team decided to skip the High School State Team Championship due to a conflict with the Spring Fling dance, Lakeside's first major dance since the pandemic shutdown all such activities in March of 2020.

When the dust settled after four days of non-stop chess, here were the results:

Bughouse:

Eric Zhang and Brandon Peng teamed up and scored a solid six points from ten games in the five-round double-Swiss event, tying for fifth place (seventh on tiebreaks).

The brother-sister team of Rishi + Kaavya Lakshminarayanan scored three points in the 22-team field and had a blast!

Blitz:

Five Lakesiders (Eric Z. – 7.5/12, Rishi L. – 7.5/12, Brandon P. – 7.0/12, Christopher P. – 6.0/12, and Arnab B. – 4.5/12) competed in the six-round double-Swiss tournament and took fifth place as a team with 26 points! Washington State's IM Anthony He won the Blitz Championship on tiebreaks with 11 points from 12 games!

K-12 U1200:

Anjali Walsh (4.0, 887 – 1001) won three, drew two, and lost two games and played some very entertaining games along the way!

K-12 U1600:

The four-player team of Daniel Wang (5.5, 1300 – 1476), Christopher Peng (5.0, 1039 – 1357), Stuart Bushfield (4.0, 1191 – 1220), and Arnav Bablani (1.0, 928 – 895) scored 15.5 points and finished in fourth place on tiebreaks!

K-12 U1900:

The powerful five-player team of Aditya Singh (5.0, 1585 – 1711), Brandon Peng (5.0, 1686 – 1714), Rishi Lakshminarayanan (5.0, 1427 – 1510), Sophie Szeto (4.0, 1506 – 1499), and Michael Nelson (4.0, 1235 – 1357) scored 19.0 points and finished in first place! Congratulations to the K-12 U1900 Championship Team! For our graduating seniors Michael N. and Aditya S., it was a great way to end their high school chess careers! We wish them the best as they both, coincidentally, head off to college at the University of Chicago next fall!

K-12 Championship:

Lakeside's two highest-rated players, NM Eric Zhang (5.5, 2204 – 2218) and Sophie Tien (4.0, 1884 – 1865) competed as a two-player army in the K-12 Championship section. We hope to build up our championship team again in future years and make a run at the title! For Eric it was a very strong tournament in which he played several brilliant games. He has generously shared them here with the Northwest Chess readers. Eric was just half-a-point shy of first place, which ended up in a seven-way tie this year. Washington's IM Anthony He, from Tesla STEM High School, was one of the co-champions with six points.

As always, I am humbled to coach such an incredible team of players. Many of our players developed their own unique style over the course of the pandemic and are now making adjustments and fine-tuning their game as we transition to OTB chess once again. There were many wild and entertaining games, with several clutch performances achieved by our players. Especially notable was Aditya's fantastic 5.0/6 undefeated streak in the first six games, which set up the U1900 team in prime position to make a run at the championship heading into the final round. Brandon, Rishi, and Michael's clutch last-round wins plus Sophie's safe well-timed draw sealed the deal and earned a well-deserved championship victory for the Lakeside team. Congratulations team! Special thanks to all our players and parents for all their support and help making this incredible performance possible. We look forward to many more great experiences and continued success at High School Nationals in the years to come!

WASHINGTON STATE ELEMENTARY CHESS CHAMPIONSHIPS

2022

By WSECC Organizers

Tacoma, WA—April 30, 2022

The 2022 Washington State Elementary Chess Championships (WSECC) were held in person at the Greater Tacoma Convention Center on Saturday,

April 30. This year's event marked the first time since 2019 that the WSECC, the largest annual chess tournament in the Pacific Northwest, was conducted over-the-board after two years of being held online, first on ChessKid.com in 2020, and then on chess.com in 2021 due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Based on the latest guidelines for large gatherings from the CDC and state and local health departments, face masks were required for everyone in attendance and proof of vaccination (or a negative PCR test) for everyone age 12 and up was required to enter the convention center. Despite the challenging circumstances, 776 players competed in the five-round Swiss tournament across 12 sections separated by grade-level and rating: Kindergarten, First Grade, Second Grade, Third Grade, Fourth Grade, Fifth Grade, Sixth Grade, Middle School U1100, Middle School U1500, Middle School Open (two-day), I Love Chess Too 9-12, and I Love Chess Too Adult.

Hosting an event of this magnitude presented many logistical challenges and ran incredibly smoothly thanks to the tremendous efforts of the WSECC Organizing Committee, Tacoma Convention Center Staff, and numerous volunteers! We would especially like to thank Chief Organizer Jacob Mayer, Pairings Chiefs Ben Radin and Todd May, Chief Tournament Director Randy Kaech, Kindergarten Section Chief Lane Van Weerdhuizen, Kindergarten Section Assistant Chief Siva Sankrithi, Help Desk

Supervisor Donna May, and Chief Section TDs Norm May, Alec Beck, Derek Zhang, Kyle Haining, Tim Campbell, Brad Stensland, Rushaan Mahajan, Stone Kaech, and Chouchanik Airapetian. Chess Enrichment Association (CEA) board members Josh Sinanan, Edith Lau, and James Stripes provided additional support along with a plethora of parent volunteers including Siddharth Agrawal, Kristina Yumul-Abueg, Rajiv Aggarwal, Megha Sharma, Walter Guity, Katherine Kim, Neeti Jain, Alicia Li, Neema Chawla. High School volunteers Melina Li, Jai Obulisamy, Angela Agaian, Josiah Tiblow, Sophie Szeto were amazing, as were volunteers Duane Polich, Larry Greenawalt, Deanna Kaech, and Heather May. Two courageous ladies, Detective Denise “Cookie” Bouldin and Karen Schmidt, were in charge of securing the door to the playing hall, which only players and designated personnel were permitted to enter after the start of each round. Meiling Cheng was our official photographer once again and took many phenomenal photos (500+) over the course of the day.

Our wonderful chess vendors—John Dill from Spokane and Megan Lee from Bellevue—greatly enhanced the prestige of the event. John offered high-quality chess equipment and even brought with him medallions from last year’s online State Championship hosted by Inland Chess Academy for kids who didn’t receive one yet to pick up. Megan Lee, a two-time Washington State Chess Champion (2020, 2022) and Women’s International Master, was onsite selling t-shirts and other customized chess-themed apparel! Our other favorite vendor, Embroiderific, unfortunately was unable to make it this year due to a last-minute emergency. Last but not least, IM Georgi Orlov was present at the Chess Mates Foundation booth analyzing games, playing blitz chess, and setting up tricky puzzles for kids to solve.

The pace of play was fast and furious amongst the younger players in the Kindergarten Section, but more deliberate and measured amongst the older sections. In fact, the entire Kindergarten tournament wrapped up just before 1:00 PM, when the rest of the older players were just about to start their third round! With many players experiencing their first OTB chess tournament ever, or at least in a few years, there were a few amusing and surprising things that happened:

*The towering 5.0 trophies were awarded to all State Champions and co-Champions in each grade level.

In the Kindergarten Section, one boy was playing “Teleportation Chess,” jumping his king all the way to the back rank and capturing the opponent’s pieces in one go! Needless to say, his opponents were not too thrilled about this new rule, and reported it to the judges Lane and Siva, who were able to resolve the situation!

In the Fourth Grade Section, a boy who was playing in his first-ever chess tournament reported to a judge that he had just won his chess game and he didn’t even know it! Apparently, the boy’s opponent noticed the checkmate and claimed it for him, or else the game may have continued illegally!

When the dust settled after eight hours of play, a brief awards ceremony was held around 5:30 PM to honor the top-scoring players and teams. Those with a plus score were able to pick up their point-award trophies immediately following the final round.

Congratulations to the following Washington State Elementary Champions:

Kindergarten: Daniel D Yun (5.0, 1183–1201)

First Grade: Edgar Li (5.0, 1090–1214) & Kunal Jayadevan (5.0, 1014–1148)

I Love Chess Too 9-12: Shiv Mehrotra (5.0, 1698–1739)

I Love Chess Too Adult: Dmitry Zusman (5.0, 1300–1520)

In addition to the individual trophies, plaques were awarded to the top 15 scoring teams in both the merged first—third and fourth—sixth grade level sections. Team score consisted of the top four scores from players attending the same school.

Congratulations to the chess gladiators who competed at State and many thanks to all who contributed to this fantastic event!

The 2022 Ignacio Perez Memorial Northwest Chess Grand Prix

Murlin Varner, number cruncher

As I warned last month, there is little change in the standings. Just four events added since we last met, and three of those were under ten players each. The only one in double figures was the Inland Empire Open in Spokane with a total of 18 players.

May had a bit more activity and should have provided plenty of changes to the standings. Specifically, this would be because of the Washington Open, held Memorial Day weekend in Redmond. With a 5x multiplier and (probably) well over 100 entrants, it will have the biggest impact of the year. Also in May were four opportunities at the Chandra Alexis Chess Club in Boise and the Quads and Tornado at the Seattle Chess Club. All of that is in the past or soon to be so (depending on the time this issue reaches your hands), and what I really need to pump are the upcoming events in June.

Known to me here in early May are the Emerald City Open at the Seattle Chess Club on June 25-26. There are also four potential events in Boise, one each weekend, should enough players sign up. Beyond that, it is kind of a mystery. Or was, until a bit past my deadline. I guess this qualifies as "Breaking News!"

On June 4, there will be Quads at the Seattle Chess Club. On the weekend of June 18-19 you have the choice of the Rusty Miller Memorial Tournament, which is being held online at chess.com, or the SCC Tornado, which is on the 19th only. The Miller event has a twist, in that there are six rounds in the Open section, for a maximum point potential of eight, while the lower section will have twelve rounds at G/30 (the fastest time control allowed for a Grand Prix event). That gives the lower-rated players a potential of as many as 14 Grand Prix points. Ads for all these events can be found elsewhere in this magazine. (Remember, to get the completion bonus, there cannot be any Fs or Us on your schedule. You have to play all your games or pre-arrange for half-point byes.)

Looking forward a bit more, the Vancouver Open will be played at the Hampton Inn on July 23-24. This event will have a 3x multiplier. The rest of July will be discussed in my next column, I hope.

I will mention again that I am retiring from the Grand Prix at the end of this campaign, my 20th year. I do not know whether the program will continue, due to the lack of participation of the OCF or ICA, but if it does, we will need some new number cruncher to fill the gap.
