Northwest Chess Hall of Fame

This month, January 2023, we begin to feature the inaugural class in the Northwest Chess Hall of Fame. We plan to reveal the first six inductees approximately one every two months during the year, depending on magazine space availability and our ability to produce introductory biographies on schedule.

Our first inductee is the legendary Life Master Viktors Pupols (see bio by IM John Donaldson, page 4). While the other five names of the inaugural class will appear one by one in future issues, we can tell you now that Viktors is the only one still with us. His history in the region is heavily weighted to playing chess practically everywhere over the past seven or eight decades, though he also has contributed to Northwest Chess magazine (even when it wasn’t yet Northwest Chess by name), given lectures at local clubs, and run tournaments, notably events on the ferries of Puget Sound. “Unkel Vik” was a fixture at Seattle’s Last Exit on Brooklyn in its heyday, blitzing with future GM Yasser Seirawan and countless others long into the University District nights.

Pupols is well-known to be one of the few players on the planet able to claim a plus score against World Champion Robert James Fischer. Of course his victory came a bit before Fischer was the World Champion, or even a Grandmaster, but it still counts. The game was an exciting Latvian Gambit, one of Viktors’ specialties, in a U. S. Junior event. Vik and Bobby were playing blitz the night before, with Bobby expressing doubt that Viktors would play such a bizarre opening in a real game against him. Next day he did exactly that, and the rest is the stuff of legend.

One little-known fact about Viktors is his claim in the 1980s to be writing the definitive book on the best gas station and rest stop toilets in at least three states, having visited practically all of them driving obscure routes to tournament venues across the region. We aren’t sure if he ever found a publisher.

Congratulations on being the first inductee into the new Northwest Chess Hall of Fame, Unkel Vik.

— Ralph Dubisch for the Northwest Chess Board of Directors

NORTHWEST CHESS HALL OF FAME INDUCTEE

VIKTORS PUPOLS

IM JOHN DONALDSON

The Pacific Northwest (British Columbia, Idaho, Oregon and Washington) has a rich chess tradition dating back roughly 150 years. During this time, it has produced a number of outstanding players including two-time World Championship Candidate Yasser Seirawan, Canadian Champions Peter Biyiasas and Duncan Suttles as well as three-time gold-medal winning U.S. Olympiad team member Arthur Dake. All, however, pale in terms of longevity when compared to the iron-man of chess in this region, if not the entire United States, Viktors Pupols.

Born in Latvia and raised in Germany, Viktors arrived in Tacoma in 1953 at the age of 19 and soon established himself as one of the best in the area, playing in his first state championship the following year. He has made a habit of participating in this annual invitational round robin event and through 2022 has competed in 50 of them. Records are supposedly made to be broken, but it's hard to imagine that happening to this one.

When Viktors played in his first Washington State Championship he was second to J.L. Sheets. This is the same Sheets who won a record nine Washington State Championship titles and was the victor in the inaugural competition in 1932. Viktors is indeed living history.

The Washington State Championship isn't the only tournament Viktors has played in. The US Chess online rating site, which goes back to September 1991, reports Pupols has played in 651 events the past three decades. Add in his activity the preceding four decades and it's likely Viktors has competed in over 1000 tournaments and played over 6000 games in his career.

Along the way Pupols has collected a number of scalps, but perhaps none as impressive as those of International Masters Bryce Tiglon and Dmitry Zilberstein in 2019 when he was in his early 80s. This is an accomplishment only a handful of octogenarian players have accomplished. On the other end of the age spectrum, Viktors defeated 12-year-old Bobby Fischer in the 1955 US Junior. All those who have played Viktors can be thankful they do not need six degrees of separation to connect to Bobby.

The subject of a full-length biography by Larry Parr (Viktors Pupols: American Master) which covers his career up to 1983, Viktors is the standard by which multiple generations of rising young stars have measured their progress. Long may this continue!

2022-2023 States Cup Championship

Siva Sankrithi

Week three (Tuesday November 15, 2022) saw the Washington U2200 team faceoff against California North, a formidable challenge. We debuted NM Eric Zhang on board one, with NM Daniel Shubin, and experts Michael Omori and Advaith Vijayakumar returning on two, three, and four, respectively. Like California-S last week, California-N put a 2400+ player on board one, namely FM Rayan Taghizadeh, along with experts Nathan Fong, Theo Biyayas, and Bryce Yeh. California-N got off to a huge 3.5-0.5 lead in the first quarter, with only Eric holding a draw. In quarter two, California-N extended their lead to 6-2, with Advaith winning and Eric drawing again. Needing only 2.5 to secure the win in the second half, the odds were heavily stacked against us. I don't know if there was some epic halftime speech from Jacob or what, but we dominated the third quarter, going 3.5-0.5 with wins by Daniel, Eric, and Michael, and a draw by Advaith. Notably Daniel, with the black pieces, upset 2400 Rayan. Trailing 5.5-6.5 headed into the fourth quarter, the odds were still stacked against us, but chances were there. Ultimately Rayan and Nathan proved too strong for our top boards and while Michael won and Advaith drew, we fell 7-9, bringing our team score to two wins and a loss on the season, still in a good position to make the playoffs. After a brief hiatus, we resume versus our Northwest Chess friends, Oregon, on Tuesday 12-6. Get excited too for the free for all event thereafter where boards one will faceoff against other board ones only, board twos will faceoff against other board twos only, etc.

Week three (Wednesday November 16, 2022) saw the Washington U1800 team faceoff against our strong northwest siblings from the South, team Oregon. Oregon was led by superstar siblings NM Zoey Tang and Austin Tang, along with Jonathan Disenhof and Neev Kodarapu. We went with a more balanced lineup of Vidip Kona, Paul Lazarte, Vihaan Jammalamadaka, and Wade Suess. The first quarter was even, 2-2, with Wade scoring an upset over NM Zoey and Vidip besting Neev. The second quarter was even too, with the Tang siblings winning for Oregon and Vidip and Paul winning for us. 4-4 at the half. The third quarter was even as well, with Vidip and Vihaan winning. 6-6 with a quarter to play! There is no separating these northwest friends and rivals! In the final round, the Tang siblings proved too strong again, and while Vihaan won, Neev scored the win on four to give Oregon the 9-7 win. Kudos on a great match! The team now has two wins and a loss overall and is in a good position to make the playoffs. We resume after a break versus Hawaii on Wednesday December 7. Another free-for-all event will follow here with board ones vs ones, twos vs twos, etc.

Remember you can watch all Washington States Chess Cup matches, in both U2200 and U1800, on twitch.tv/slothyChess, streamed by our own legendary Candidate Master Tim Moroney. Stay tuned! Cheers!

chess. There is simply no time to work out definitive tactics when faced with such dizzying complexity.

1.e4 e6 2.Qf3!?

Isn't there some opening rule against this sort of thing?

2...d5 3.d3 Nc6 4.c3 Nf6 5.Nd2 e5! 6.h3 Bc5 7.g4!?

White insists on being provocative but falls behind in development.

Position after 7.g4

7...dxe4

Perhaps it is even better to continue to develop and only exchange in the center when forced: 7...Be6 8.g5! (8.Ne2 looks a bit like the game, but with more central tension.) 8...dxe4 9.dxe4 (9.Nxe4?! Nxe4 10.dxe4 (10.Qxe4?? Bd5+) 10...Qe7 Development and structure.) 9...Nd7

8.Nxe4 Nxe4 9.dxe4 Be6 10.Ne2 Qd6

10...Qd7 11.Bg5 (11.Bg2 0-0-0 12.0-0 Qd3; 11.Ng3 Nb4! is practically winning.) 11...f6 12.Rd1 Qf7 13.Be3 Bxe3 14.Qxe3 Bxa2

11.Ng3 g6!?

Position after 11...g6

The threat of Nf5 doesn't feel like enough to justify weakening the kingside dark squares. Black has a noticeable edge in development and pawn structure, and anytime a knight does choose to drop into f5, ...g6 will come sooner or later to give it a nudge. 11...0-0-0!? 12.Be2

a) 12.Bg5? f6 13.Be3 Nb4! 14.Qe2 Bc4+;

b) 12.Nf5 Qf8 (12...Bxf5 13.Qxf5+ Kb8 14.Be2 Ne7) 13.Bb5 h5 14.Bxc6 hxc4 15.Bxb7+ Kxb7 16.hxc4 Rxl1+ 17.Qxh1 g6 18.Ne3 Qd6;

12...a5 13.Be3 (13.Nf5 Qf8) 13...Bxe3 14.Qxe3 Kb8 15.Rd1 Qe7 16.Nf5 Qf8 17.Rxd8+ Nxd8 and White's minor initiative peters out, leaving ...g6 and ...Bxa2 on the possibilities list.; 11...Nb4!? 12.Bb5+ c6 13.cxb4 Bxb4+ 14.Kf1 cxb5 probably favors Black, but not by as much as in the last note, with the black queen on d7 preventing the Bb5+ defense.

12.Bg5 f6!

A clever idea, only necessary due to the weakening caused by ...g6, though.

13.Bxf6!?

White should grab the tempo: 13.Rd1 Qe7

13...0-0 14.g5 Nb4!?

14...Rad8 15.Be2 Qd2+ 16.Kf1 Be7

Position after 14...Nb4

15.Be2??

15.Qe2 is forced. Then 15...Rad8 16.Rh2 (16.Rd1 Qxd1+ 17.Qxd1 Rxd1+ 18.Kxd1 Bxf2 19.cxb4 Bxg3; 16.Bxd8? Bxf2+ 17.Qxf2 Rxf2 18.Kxf2 Qd2+ 19.Ne2 Nc2 20.Rc1 Qe3+ 21.Kg2 Qxe4+ 22.Kh2 Ne3 and despite a numeric superiority, White is helpless to save the exposed king and hanging pieces. 23.Ng3 Qh4!, for example.) 16...Bxa2!? (16...Nd3+ 17.Qxd3 Qxd3 18.Bxd3 Rxd3 19.Bxe5 and White may be hanging together.) 17.Bxd8 Bb3! 18.Rd1 (18.Bf6 Rxf6! (18...Nc2+ 19.Qxc2 Bxc2 20.Bc4+ Rf7 21.b4 Bb6) 19.Rc1 with considerable complications. 19...Rf8 20.Qd2 Qxd2+ 21.Kxd2 Bxf2 22.Nh1 Rd8+ 23.Ke2 Bg1 24.Rg2 Nd3 25.Rxg1 Nxc1+ 26.Ke3 for example, is computer-directed mayhem.

15...Nc2+ 16.Kf1 Nxa1 17.h4 Rxf6 18.gxf6

Position after 18.gxf6

18...h5??

Stockfish shows the cold-blooded 18...Rf8! 19.Nf5 (19.h5 Rxf6) 19...Bxf5 20.exf5 Kh8 21.b4 Bb6, and the computer has no worries on defense.; 18...Qd2 in order to meet 19.h5 with 19...g5 also leaves White with no real compensation.

19.Nxh5! gxh5??

19...Nc2

20.Qxh5 Kf8 21.Qh8+ Bg8

Position after 21...Bg8

22.Bh5??

The win is fairly straightforward with 22.Qg7+ Ke8 23.Qxg8+ Qf8 (23...Kd7 24.Qxa8 Qxf6 25.Rh2) 24.Qe6+ Kd8 25.Rg1+.

22...Qd3+

The tide turns yet again, but this is the final time.

23.Kg2

Possibly what White missed was 23.Kg1 Qg3+ 24.Kf1 Qxf2#

23...Qxe4+ 24.f3 Qc2+ 25.Kg3 Bf2+ 26.Kg2

26.Kh3 Qh7

2022 Turkey Shoot

Adam Porth

Linus Wannamaker bagged a turkey! Literally. The Turkey Shoot was an annual event that I have run in the past and why not bring it back? There is a renewed interest in chess events and each tournament has new tournament players. This tournament, played in Coeur d'Alene on November 20, 2022, had two more newbies among the 12 players of familiar faces.

Each player was provided a small pie of their choice and the games began with a gobble! Ken Erickson stayed on board one for four rounds and was the expected winner, however, Linus won in round four as both players used almost all their time (G/30). Even the best of us struggles with time trouble as the round three game demonstrated with Ken, down three pawns in a game against Braedon Marver. Ken was in time trouble again against Braedon with nearly three minutes left on his clock and Ken having less than 30 seconds. Ken was able to successfully collect all Braedon's pawns with his king and queen his remaining pawn with only two seconds left! Braedon resigned while the chess hall watched in awe of Ken's speed and focus.

First place – Linus Wannamaker (Turkey)

Second place – Kenneth Erickson (Pumpkin Pie)

Third place – Desmond Porth (yam)

The Italian Game.

3...Nf6 4.d3

This quiet way to handle the Two Knights Defense is now by far the most popular method in Grandmaster play. Long ago 4.Ng5 was standard, but it is now recognized as time wasting, and Black is thought to get plenty of counterplay with 4...d5 (4...Bc5!? for the swashbucklers.) 5.exd5 Na5 (5...Nxd5? leads to the infamous Fried Liver attack. White can choose the immediate sacrifice on f7 followed by Qf3, or open the center with 6.d4.; Other moves have also been played and analyzed, mostly before there was computer assistance in the process. 5...Nd4 6.c3 b5 7.Bf1 Nxd5; 5...b5 6.Bf1 h6 7.Nxf7 Kxf7 8.dxc6) 6.Bb5+ c6 7.dxc6 bxc6 8.Be2 h6 9.Nf3 e4∞.; 4.d4 can lead to the Max Lange Attack. 4...exd4 5.e5 (5.0-0 Nxe4 (5...Bc5 6.e5 d5 7.exf6 dxc4) 6.Re1 d5 7.Bxd5 (7.Nc3!?) 7...Qxd5 8.Nc3∞)

4...Bc5 5.c3 a6 6.Bb3 Ba7 7.0-0 d6 8.Nbd2 0-0 9.h3 Many of the subtleties of this opening now depend on whether one side or the other advances their a-pawn one or two spaces, starts maneuvering the knight from the queenside to the kingside, breaks in the center, pins on g4/g5... Even the top GMs are capable of messing this up on a regular basis.

6.Re1 d6 7.a4 (7.c3 Na5 8.Bb5 a6 9.Ba4 b5 10.Bc2 c5 and we seem to have reached a position from the Spanish Game (Ruy Lopez). The modern way of playing the Italian lends itself to these transpositions.) 7...Na5 8.Ba2 c5 9.c3 Nc6 10.Nbd2 Be6 11.Nc4

14.Nxb7 Nb6 15.Bb5 has similar issues.) 14.Nxb7 loses a black pawn and doesn't solve the problem of the loose knights.

13.Qf3 Rad8 14.b4 b5

Black has something of a bad bishop and those weak e-pawns to defend in the long term, so looks for short-term tactics to provide compensation. 14...Nxc3 at first looks interesting: 15.Nxc3 e4, but 16.Nxe4!! (The idea was 16.dxe4 Qxb4! regaining the piece with interest.) 16...Bxa1 17.Bg5 Bf6 (17...Qxb4 18.Rxa1 and White has both material and activity.) 18.Nxf6+ gxf6 19.Bxf6+-

15.Bb3

15.Bxb5 seems quite possible. The only risk lies in complex tactics such as 15...Nd4 16.cxd4 Qxb4, but something like 17.Bg5 Qxb5 18.Bxf6 Nxf6 19.Nxf6+ gxf6 20.Qxf6 leaves White with a strong initiative: 20...exd4 (20...Rxd4 21.Rxe5 Rd5 22.Re4 Rg5 23.Rae1; 20...Qxd3 21.Re3) 21.Re5 (21.Rxe6?! 20...Ra8??

I like how White has opened and started operations on the a-file, and here Black cracks tactically. 20...Be7 maintains the original disadvantage.

21.Rea1

Very good and quite thematic, but White can win more quickly with tactical motifs involving the loose rook on a8, overloaded pawn e6, loose knights, and a fork on d5: 21.Rxa8 Rxa8 22.Nxf6+ Qxf6 (22...gxf6 23.Bxd5 exd5 24.Qxf5) 23.Bxd5, when a recapture loses the rook to a fork, 23...exd5 24.Qxd5+.

Then on Sunday were the Susan Polgar Book Signing, SPFNO Girls Workshop, and Susan Polgar Simul.

The organizing team of WCF President Josh Sinanan (Chief Organizer), Jacob Mayer (Chief Tournament Director), Ben Radin (Registration and Pairings Director), and Eddie Chang (Events Manager) oversaw the proceedings and orchestrated the chess extravaganza. Amazing photographs were taken throughout the event by photographer extraordinaire Meiling Cheng. Parents and Coaches Seminar

The first side event to kick off the weekend's action-packed schedule was the Parents and Coaches Seminar, which took place in the Redmond Ballroom on Saturday, October 22 from 10:30-11:30am. The one-hour seminar, which was led by Susan Polgar, provided an opportunity for parents and coaches to learn how to effectively guide children on their chess journey. Participants were able to ask questions and hear tips from Grandmaster Susan Polgar, who is herself a chess parent and former coach of the successful Webster University Chess Team.

Megan Lee Game Review + Analysis & All Comers Blitz

On Saturday afternoon from 12:30-4:30pm, we were treated to a special appearance by two-time Washington State Chess Champion Megan Lee, who conducted game review and analysis from 12:30-2pm followed by All Comers Blitz from 3:00-4:30pm in the Redmond Ballroom! Several kids eager to pick up some tips and strategies from the State Champ had their games reviewed and analyzed by WIM Megan Lee, who just recently returned from playing in the US Women's Championship in St. Louis. After a short break, players and parents had a chance to challenge Megan Lee to a thrilling game of five-minute Blitz Chess! Megan had several tough games, but she remained undefeated.

Chess-inspired Artwork on display

Local artist and Seattle Chess Club member Gabriela Osias was on-site on Saturday from 12-4pm to display some of her chess-inspired artwork! Players and parents had a chance to check out some samples on her Instagram (https://www.instagram.com/gosi_creates/). Gabriela's work is notable for its novelty and fine craftsmanship and makes the perfect gift for any chess enthusiast!

SPFNO Blitz Championship

The 2022 SPFNO Blitz Championship attracted 40 players and took place on

Northwest Chess

Saturday, October 22 at 6:30pm in the Seattle Ballroom. The seven-round single Swiss in two sections, K-5 and 6-12, was directed by Jacob Mayer. Games were US Chess Blitz Rated with a time control of game in five minutes with no delay.

In the K-5 section, Vidip Kona, a fourth grader from Redmond, emerged victorious with a perfect 7.0/7 score! Other top finishers included Michael Xiong (6.0 – second place), Odbayar Yondon (4.5 – tied third place), and Zachary Chua (4.5 – tied third place). In the 6-12 section, Sammamish seventh grader Stephen Willy reigned supreme with seven points from seven games. Four players shared second-fifth place honors with five points apiece: Vihaan Jammalamadaka, Nikash Vemparala, Owen Xuan, and Edward Cheng. Congratulations to the winners!

Special Appearance by Magician Rich Waters

On Saturday evening from 7-9pm, kids and adults gathered nearby the blitz playing hall on the Bellevue Marriott Foyer to witness a tricky and exciting exhibition! Local magician Rich Waters performed some close-up magic tricks and balloon twisting, much to the enjoyment of a mesmerized audience! This was a big hit, and we will be sure to bring back the magician in future events. Many thanks to Karen Schmidt for connecting us with Rich, whom she met at the recently opened Detective Cookie Chess Park in Seattle!

Susan Polgar Book Signing

The Susan Polgar Book Signing occurred on Sunday, October 23 from 10-11am in the Redmond Ballroom. GM Susan Polgar, who has authored several books throughout her playing and teaching careers, was on site to autograph books and take pictures. A variety of books written by Susan Polgar and well-suited for all levels of players were available for purchase: Learn Chess the Right Way, Vols. 1-5 and A World Champion's Guide to Chess.

SPFNO Girls Workshop

The SPFNO Girls Workshop was held on Sunday from 11:30am-12:30pm in the Redmond Ballroom. Susan Polgar and other local female chess leaders including WCF Women's and Girl's Director Chouchan Airapetian, Detective

Denise "Cookie" Bouldin, Karen Schmidt, and WCF Scholastic Director Rekha Sagar hosted the special one-hour workshop that focused on empowering girls through chess. The girls attending enjoyed the presentation and learned how Susan Polgar broke through gender barriers on her way to becoming the first woman to earn the Grandmaster title!

Susan Polgar Simul

The Susan Polgar Simul took place on Sunday afternoon from 1-4 PM in the Redmond Room, which was the site for most of the side events. 18 brave scholastic chess players took their seats with the black pieces against GM Susan Polgar. For most of the contestants, it was their first time even playing against a Grandmaster!

After only 2.5 hours play, all games had finished in favor of Susan Polgar, a clean sweep! Although, no wins or draws were achieved this time, the last man standing was Vihaan Pai (1172), who lasted 60+ moves! Congratulations to the fearless young players who took part!

Puzzle Solving Competition

Forty-three brave contestants were given a maximum of 30 minutes to solve 20 checkmates puzzles. Scoring was based on speed, accuracy, and completeness. Congratulations to the winners:

This move caught me by surprise, and from here on it became a very close game.

1.d4 Nf6 2.Nf3 c5

Normally I play the King's Indian Defense, but I decided to go for a Benoni structure in this game.

3.d5 g6 4.Nc3

My opponent takes advantage of the 2.Nf3 move order and avoids playing c4.

4...d6 5.e4 Bg4

Common motive in Benoni structures, I wanted to play ...Nbd7 and take control of the e5-square.

6.h3 Bxf3 7.Qxf3

7.h3 helps Black, as the bishop is going to take on f3 anyways.

Idea of f4

20.Ne3

20...Qd8 21.Bd4 b5

22.f4 Nd7 23.Bxg7 Kxg7

White has an edge.

24.Ne3 Nc5 25.axb5

25...axb5 26.Qf3 Ra8

We are fighting for the a-file.

27.c3?!

At first glance seems logical to take control of the dark squares, but allows the file to be taken by Black.

27...Nb3 28.Rxa8 Qxa8 29.Nc2

Both sides were low on time, and opponent blunders the exchange.

17...Nb4

Critical moment. 17...Qc4 is the best move, as if 18.Nc6 then 19.d5! winning the c7-pawn. Otherwise, if 18.Na6 19.Rd5 comes and after something like 19.Qf6, White can go for this Qb3 Rb5 idea to win the b7 pawn. Instead, I played the worst move.

18.Qf5 f6! 19.a3

Idea to play Rd5.

19...Na6 20.Rd5 Qe6

Here, I missed that I could exchange on e6 and play b4, where White has a slight advantage and can play for a win. However, I wanted to create imbalances and played:

21.Nh4

Not the best of moves, While's still equal.

21...g6

Critical position. The best was to exchange queens here and to play b4 like mentioned earlier, but I kept the queens on the board.

22.Qf3 c6 23.Ra5

Though the rook looks almost trapped, Black only has an edge here, and if something like ...Nc7, then Rc5 could come and White's rook would come back into play. Though the play is easier for Black, we agreed on a draw as he had seven minutes while I had 12. Overall, I missed a few chances which could have given me an advantage.

SPF National Open (Year Two In Seattle)

Karen Schmidt

It's hard to believe that a whole year has elapsed since the first of at least three annual Susan Polgar Foundation National Open scholastic tournaments to be held in Seattle. Last year I volunteered the whole weekend with many other local chess players and tournament organizers, and had the opportunity to meet not only Susan Polgar, but also Seattle's own Detective Cookie (local police officer who has run a free chess program for inner-city kids for the past 16 years).

This year there were over 400 kids participating in the K-12 scholastic tournament—in either a one-day five-round, or two-day six-round, tournament. In addition to the two main events, there were also several side events: a chess-puzzle-solving contest, an evening blitz tournament on Saturday, a Sunday book signing, a Girls Only workshop, and a Simul on Sunday afternoon with Susan playing 20 kids.

Another popular and highly entertaining side event was a magic show on Saturday evening in a main common area, while the blitz tournament was in progress. Since I “found” the magician, “Magic Rich” Waters, myself—meeting him while playing chess at the brand-new Detective Cookie Chess Park! I was committed to seeing his performance. And what a performance it was! A lot of younger children and parents gathered around, and his tricks amazed us. We experienced disappearing scarves, mind-boggling rope tricks, invisible card tricks, a bit of hypnosis with some juggling thrown in, and then a second hour when he twisted balloon critters for all the kids. (Balloon swords were also very popular.) I have no idea how any of those magic tricks actually work, but we were all spellbound. No doubt Magic Rich, who performs at birthday parties, conferences, and other events around the state, will be back for future scholastic tournaments. It was a lovely break from the intensive chess games for both players and parents.

This year the parents were much better behaved and seemed to accept the fact that they were not allowed in the tournament halls while the games were in progress. That made the “parent control duty” much easier than at several other tournaments I have attended as a volunteer.

The Simul was Sunday afternoon from 1:00 PM until 4:00 PM, with Susan Polgar playing 20 kids. Parents and volunteers were allowed to remain seated in the room to watch. Several of the games lasted almost the entire three hours, with six or eight very young children among the last few games to finish. I had a brief chat with the McCallum family afterwards; they had travelled from Vancouver, British Columbia, to participate in the tournament. Both Elliott (age six) and Siobhan (age nine) also played in the Simul. Elliott, whose feet did not reach the floor from his chair, explained to me that his sister had received a chess set for her sixth birthday. Shortly after this (he would have been three), he began to play chess on that set, playing against himself... a la Bobby Fischer. Both children now take small group lessons at the Vancouver Chess Club and belong to the chess club (which meets weekly during lunch recess) at their school. Both children will undoubtedly be high-level players in a few short years. The “last man standing” at the Simul was Yihaan Pai, age eight. Susan Polgar was very generous about signing every child's scoresheet. She also kindly posed for a photograph with every child who won a trophy at both days' award ceremonies.

The Susan Polgar Foundation also awarded two $50,000 college scholarships to top girl and boy finishers in the K-12 Open event. Webster College in Saint Louis—where Susan is headquartered—has a strong chess program, which Polgar previously coached.

I was fortunate to stay after the tournament and enjoy take-out Thai food with Susan Polgar, Washington Chess Federation President Josh Sinanan, Detective Cookie and several other members of the organizing committee. They discussed this year's event over dinner — what went well and what might be slightly revised for next year. Susan was headed for France next, almost immediately.

There is a huge amount of time, energy and planning required for a scholastic tournament of this size. Interestingly, there was a film crew with Polgar in Seattle at this tournament. They are making a documentary about her life, and this was one of their first filmings, according to the crew director. Stay tuned down the road — it hasn't been determined yet which network will air the documentary. I am already committed to volunteering at next year's third annual Susan Polgar Foundation National Open!

In a recent article in this magazine (“Took The Train To Spokane,” December 2022 Northwest Chess, page 27), Karen Schmidt laments the alarmingly high standard of play among unrated players at recent tournaments in the Pacific Northwest. She complains that “...there seemingly are no more novices... I realized that the UNR (unrated) players now average about a 1600 skill level.”

She attributes the high level of play of these tournament newbies to the fact that they most probably have spent countless hours playing on chess.com and lichess, and have most probably watched countless videos by the likes of Youtubers like Agadmator and Gothamchess, all before taking their first step through the doors of a brick-and-mortar tournament hall. I would add that the pandemic definitely helped too; personally, I probably spent more time playing online chess and taking chess lessons during the last two years than I did in all the years prior to that, combined. So to be fair, it wasn't just unrated players who benefitted from the COVID lockdowns; rank-and-file class players like me also benefitted.

But having said that, I do share Schmidt's lamentations, to a degree. It's definitely true that the standard of unrated play has gone up exponentially. Gone are the days where one can reliably expect unrated players to be noobs who barely know how the pieces move, who drop pieces right and left, so that all one has to do is simply sit back and wait for them to self-destruct and claim an easy win. Heck, these days, unrated players even win tournaments! In what is surely an unprecedented feat in the history of Idaho chess (Idaho chess historians out there, please correct me if I'm wrong), Jeremy Thomas won his debut tournament, the Eastern Idaho Open, back in September. (For the gory details, please see Jay Simonson's report on this tournament in the December 2022 issue of Northwest Chess, page 29.)

Full disclosure: Jeremy is a long-time friend and regular chess partner of mine. So I knew going into the tournament (which I also played in) that he is a strong player and would acquit himself well... but not this well. Also, although he has played tons of games on chess.com and has most likely watched at least a few chess videos before his tournament debut, Professor Thomas also has to juggle family responsibilities while serving as the Chair of the Department of Sociology,

Where Have All The Novices Gone (Long Time Passing...) Nobel Ang

Social Work, and Criminology at Idaho State. In other words, he's not exactly a chess bum or one of those annoying kids who have tons of time to devote to chess study... And yet he had the gall to win his first OTB chess tournament. What is the world coming to?!

Oh well. Life is not always fair, is it? But it's not all doom and gloom. I must also admit that playing stronger unrated players does have its upsides. I can't speak for anybody else, but my experience has been that when I play weaker players, my play tends to get a bit sloppy. I don't look as hard for tactics and other opportunities, and basically just cruise along, confident that all I have to do is wait for them to blunder and self-destruct. In contrast, facing stronger opposition forces me to look harder at the position in every move, and pushes me to play and perform at a higher level than I would have if my opponent had been a noob.

My recent game from round four of the Eastern Idaho Open illustrates this point perfectly. My opponent was a young unrated player. I had the white pieces, and after 1.d4 d5 2.Nf3 g6 3.c4 dxc4 4.e4 Bg4 5.Bxc4 Bg7, the following position resulted:

What would you play as white in this position? If I were a little less vigilant, I would have played something like 6.Be3, following the general opening rule of thumb to develop all my pieces. But because I was playing an unrated player whose real strength was unknown to me at the time, my spidey senses were on high alert, and I almost immediately spotted 6.Bxf7+!! After 6...Kxf7 7.Ng5+ Ke8 8.Qxg4, White is clearly winning; Black is a pawn down and has lost the right to castle. I then capitalized on Black's disarray and my much more active pieces to hunt down his king, eventually winning the game in 26 moves without castling or even developing my queenside rook and knight. I'm not going to show the entire game here, but if you're interested, shoot me an email at siegfried23@hotmail.com

I learned later that my opponent's provisional rating was in the 1600s, and that he had actually beaten a 1600 and a 1700 in rounds two and three, before succumbing to a lowly 1500 (me) in the final round. In other words, he would have had a provisional rating in the 1800s or the 1900s if he hadn't lost to me! I am therefore performing a valuable public service in the Idaho chess community: Preventing unrated players from having inflated provisional ratings. You're welcome.

But jokes aside, let me get back to my original point, which is that I seem to play better against strong players, especially if they are unknown quantities. As a matter of fact, my bishop sacrifice in this game was my first-ever brilliant move (according to Stockfish 11) in an OTB tournament. And it's all because of my heightened Spidey senses in the presence of strong unrated opposition. If it weren't because of this unrated player, I might have lived my entire life without ever playing a brilliant move in an OTB tournament. Okay, I'm probably being melodramatic here, but you get the point.

So yeah, I welcome the prospect of playing more strong unrated players in tournaments to come. Jeremy Thomases of the world, bring it on!

2022 Oregon Class Championships

Seventy-six players descended on the familiar confines of the DoubleTree by Hilton in Portland's Lloyd District to battle for prizes across the seven sections of the Oregon Class Championship. A slight drop-off in attendance from Washington was more than offset by the increase in attendance from Oregon and California. Technically we had players from five states, one each from Minnesota and Arizona. But more about the mystery Arizonian later in this article.

At first glance, it was sad showing for the great state of Oregon, as the outnumbered Washingtonians still managed to win three out of seven sections, and the Arizonian took one, leaving only three sections for team Oregon. But if you look a little more closely, Master/Expert champion Lennart Bjorksten though no longer an Oregonian is still part of the Portland chess community, as is Class A Champion Brent Baxter and Class C Champion Aaron Xinghan Li. And the mystery Arizonian Jack Buchannan has been living in the Portland area for over a year, playing all of his rated games in Oregon. In summary, a coalition of Oregon players and Portland area players from Washington dominated the tournament. Your move, Seattleites.

Lennart Bjorksten made an incredible comeback to win the Masters/Expert section, dropping his round one game to the always-dangerous Austin Tang but winning his final four games to finish clear first. One of the nice aspects to class tournaments is that the small section sizes allow one to experience incidents and accidents and still finish with a good result. Michael Omori and Rishabh Chinni tied for second with 3.5 points, resulting in a Washington sweep of the top prizes.

Brent Baxter's undefeated 4-1 record in the Class A section was sufficient to win by a full point, combining three wins with one draw and a bye. Jerry Sherrard, Danny Phipps, and Hussein Hashemi Senejani tied for second with three points.

Will Nobles and Kai Sebastian Lewis tied for first in the Class B section. Kai won the head-to-head matchup in round two, but Will won his last three games to catch Kai, who took byes in the last two rounds.

Aaron Xinghan Li won the Class C section with four wins and one draw, giving him in a full point lead over second place Michael Rabadan.

The mystery Arizonian, Jack Buchanan (pictured above), scored four wins and one draw to capture the Class D section by 1.5 points over second place Meet Raval. But he won't have the opportunity to win any more class D prizes, as his rating is rapidly rising to match his real strength as a player. What is his real strength? Come to Portland, play him, and find out!

Varun Venkat Iyengar won class E with the familiar winning formula of four wins and a draw with Zachary Charles Daugherty. Zachary tied for second with Andrew Alexander A Uan-Zo-Li, both finishing with 3.5 points.

Finally, Andrew Worth Carson scored 4.5 points to win Class F over second place Aiden Gray with four points.

Thanks to Dave Murray who organized the tournament and directed round one before handing it off to Chad Lykins. Thanks to Chad for carrying the tournament the last four yards rounds over the goal line. And finally, thanks to the ever-present Lilly Tang and the sometimes-present Wilson Gibbins for sitting behind the director desk and answering the thousands of questions that inexplicably come up in every tournament.

[Wilson Gibbins]

I try to create a narrative for a tournament, especially when there is none. The easy narratives these days are “Youth will be served” vs. “Old age and treachery will always beat youth and exuberance.” Perhaps this game will be an indicator, as Austin is a regular in the Junior tournaments, and Lennart is a regular in the Senior tournaments.

1.d4 Nf6 2.Bf4 d5 3.Nd2 c5 4.e3 Nc6 5.c3 Bf5 6.Ngf3

Sometimes London practitioners can steal a pawn in the opening with 6.dxc5 but this is not one of them 6...e5 7.Bg3 Bxc5.

6...e6 7.Nh4 Bg4 8.Qb3 Qd7 9.h3 Bh5 10.g4 Bg6 11.Nxg6 hxg6

The game starts well for Lennart. He has the two bishops in a quiet position, just kind of position that a more experienced player might be able to exploit against his youthful opponent.

12.Bg2 cxd4 13.exd4 Na5 14.Qc2 Bd6 15.Be3 0-0 16.0-0-0!

Position after 16.0-0-0

This is a position where looks are deceiving. It looks logical to castle long where there is more pawn cover for your king, and you can use the advanced g-pawn to attack Black's king. But the pawn structure resembles an exchange Queen's Gambit Declined Reversed where the standard plan is the minority attack, advancing the p-pawn and perhaps the a-pawn to weaken the b2-c3-d4 pawn structure. So White is castling queenside into Black's intended attacking zone. White it might look a risky to castle kingside with the g-pawn advanced, Black doesn't have any immediate pawn breaks on that side of the board. Black has one pawn break on the queenside. And he will use it effectively.

16...b5!

Marching to b4 to crack open White's king position.

17.Kb1 Rab8 18.f4

This move makes the engine evaluation worse. But it is as good a try as any. White probably can't successfully defend his king in the long run, so counterattacking Black's king is the best approach.

18...b4 19.c4

Trying to keep the b-file closed.

19...dxc4 20.Nxc4 Rfc8 21.b3

White has a tricky attempt to maintain his queenside pawn structure that doesn't quite work. 21.Ne5 Bxe5 22.dxe5 Nd5 23.Qe4 Nc3+ 24.bxc3 Qa4 Stockfish predicts great suffering for White in the near future in lines like 25.Ka1 Rxc3 26.Rb1 Nc4 27.Bc1 Rc2.

21...Nxc4 22.bxc4 b3 23.axb3 Qa4 24.Rd3 Rxc4 25.Qa2 Qxa2+ 26.Kxa2 Rc2+

White made no tactical errors, yet Black's minority attack was sufficiently strong enough bring home the point. After round one we seem to be heading toward the “Youth will be served” narrative. But that isn't how the tournament turned out, as you will see in the next game.

Lennart Bjorksten (2101) – Ryan Richardson (2043) [A45]
Oregon Class Championship

[Lennart Bjorksten]

This game decided the tournament. Entering the last round, Ryan and I were the only players at three points.

1.d4 Nf6 2.Bf4 e6 3.e3 d5 4.Nf3 Bd6 5.Ne5

Move order makes a difference! By delaying the typical c3 and Nbd2, White gets to counter Black's ...Bd6 with the knight jump, thereby avoiding trading off the London bishop.

5...0-0 6.Bd3 c5 7.c3 b6 8.0-0 Ba6

Black gets to trade off his bad bishop, but at the cost of several tempi since Black's knight will now be misplaced.

9.Bxa6 Nxa6 10.Nd2 Nb8

Correct, even if it looks strange. This retreat is the best way for Black's knight to get back into the game.

11.Rc1 Bxe5 12.dxe5

This restricts the bishop, but I like having a white pawn on e5.

12...Nfd7 13.e4

White's idea is to break open the center. This should benefit white's bishop and rooks.

13...f6 14.exd5 fxe5 15.dxe6 exf4

Position after 15...exf4

16.Qf3

I also considered Qb3 and Re1, but couldn't calculate which option was best. Turns out the computer likes Qb3, but all of these moves create tactical problems for Black, who was starting to get low on time.

16...Qc7?

Black cracks. He obviously saw that 17.Qxa8? Nc6 would trap White's queen, but White has a nice intermezzo.

17.e7!

Now Black loses decisive material. On 17...Re8 18.Qxa8, Black can no longer play ...Nc6 because the rook would hang. And if 17...Rc8 18.Qxa8 Nc6 then White simply promotes with e8=Q.

17...Nc6 18.exf8Q+ Rxf8

The rest, as they say, is a matter of technique. White merely needs to play simple, straightforward moves to activate his pieces. The extra exchange will quickly be felt.

I tend to get slaughtered by Black's kingside attack in these Dutch Defense vs. English Opening positions. Brent keeps a cool head, makes a few moves to frustrate the attack, and waits for his chance.

10.Qd2 Bd8 11.Ne1

Brent prepares to gain a little space for the kingside defense by pushing a pawn to f5.

Brent has worked to negate Black's kingside attack, which is enough to gain him a slight edge. Petrosian would be proud.

17...Be6

Seems logical to develop a piece, but Stockfish says it allows White to increase his advantage. The engines prefer 17...exf4 18.gxf4.

18.e4 Bxd5?

It is strategically correct to remove the well-placed knight, so this would be a good move if White had to recapture immediately, but...

19.exf5! Qxf5 20.Bxd5+ Kh8 21.Be4

The cold-blooded 21.Qg2 is even stronger, threatening 22.g4. If Black tries to avoid the pawn fork with 21...Qg6 (21...Qd7) then 22.fxe5 Nxe5 23.Bxe5 dxe5 24.Bf7 wins material.

21...Qe6 22.fxe5 dxe5 23.Qf8+ Qg8 24.Qxg8+ Kxg8 25.Bd5+

This check drives Black's king to h8 where it will be vulnerable to back rank mates. See move 27.

The pawn structure is symmetric, both players have developed all their pieces, so the game is about even.

15...e5? 16.Nc4!

Suddenly White's pieces start jumping all over the center by attacking the e5-pawn that just moved within attacking range and the d5-square which is no longer protected by the pawn on e6.

16...Bxf3

The best way to prevent White from taking the pawn on e5, but still a concession to give up the bishop pair and defender of the light squares d5 and f5.

17.Bxf3 b5 18.Ne3 Bc5 19.Qd3 Rfd8

If I were Black, I would be looking at the symmetrical pawn structure and White's blocked bishop on f3, and be plotting my route to equality, perhaps by exchanging the dark-squared bishops. In reality, White stands significantly better.

23...Nfxd5

Who wants to live with a pesky knight on d5 forever? That said, capturing with the knight on b6 is safer, keeping the knight on f6 to help defend the kingside.

24.exd5 f6

Perhaps this was the reason to take with the knight on f6, as it freed the f-pawn to defend the one on e5. But it weakens the light squares around Black's king. White doesn't have any attackers in the zone yet, but Black's defenders are a long way from the kingside. The attackers are about to appear.

25.Bg4 Rc7 26.Be6 Nc8 27.h4 Nd6 28.h5 Bb4 29.h6

Can White really threaten Black's king with only a bishop and a pawn? Yes, yes, he can, if his queen can shift into the attacking zone at a moment's notice.

29...Re7 30.hxg7+ Rxd7 31.Rc6 Qb7 32.Qh5

White has a winning advantage, so Black's next move can hardly be classified as a mistake, but it allows an attractive finish.

Oregon Class Championship

[Wilson Gibbins]

This round two game between the eventual Class B winners is a back-and-forth affair that finally resolves in favor of Kai Lewis. Undaunted, Will Nobles goes on to win his next three games, allowing him to catch Kai who took half-point byes in rounds four and five.

1.e3

Not the most theoretically critical line, but White has lots of chances to transpose into other openings depending on Black's next moves.

1...e5 2.c4

For example, transposing to the English Opening.

2...c6

Transposing to a Reversed Alapin Sicilian.

3.Nc3 Nf6 4.d4 exd4 5.exd4 d5 6.Nf3 Bd6 7.Bg5 dxc4 8.Bxc4

Chessbase classified this game as ECO code D20—the Queen's Gambit Accepted. Why wasn't it classified A20, the ECO code for the English line 1.c4 e5 2.e3 or even A00, the classification code for the 1.e3 opening? Because this position could have been reached through the move order 1.d4 d5 2.c4 dxc4 3.e3 e5 4.Bxc4 exd4 5.exd4 6.Nc3 c6 7.Nf3 Bd6 8.Bg5, an unlikely Queen's Gambit Accepted line that has also been reached through the French Defense move order 1.e4 e6 2.d4d5 3.exd5 exd5 4.Nf3 Bd6 5.c4 c6 6.Nc3 Nf6 7.Bg5 dxc4 8.Bxc4. Chess is a maze of twisty passages, all alike.

8...0-0 9.0-0 Nbd7 10.d5?!

A little impatient, allowing Black equality. The isolated d-pawn will be hard for Black to attack, so White has no need to hurry to liquidate the supposed weakness.

10.Re1 Nb6 11.Bb3 Bf5 (I'd be tempted to play 11...Bg4 as 12.h3 Bh5 13.g4 Bg6 14.Ne5 appears to weaken White's kingside, but Stockfish loves White's position.) 12.Ne5 gives White a decent attacking formation.

10...Nb6! 11.Bb3 cxd5 12.h3 Re8

12...Be6 is also a fine move, defending the newly won pawn on d5. But Stockfish says it 0.00, a sign that it believes that best play for both sides will result in a three-fold repetition. A sample repetition line is 13.Qd3 Rc8 14.Rad1 Re8 15.Nd4 h6 16.Bh4 Be7 17.Nxe6 fxe6 18.Qe2 Bc5 19.Ne4 Be7 20.Nc3 Bc5 21.Ne4 Be7 which looks artificial to me, but Stockfish is always right and I am always wrong.

13.Bxf6 Qxf6 14.Nxd5 Nxd5 15.Qxd5= Bf5 16.Rad1 Rad8 17.Qxb7 Be4 18.Qxa7?

18.Bd5!= Bxf3 19.Bxf3 Rb8 (19...g6 20.Qxa7? Qf4 requires White to sacrifice the exchange with 21.Rxd6) 20.Qc6 Red8 21.b3 may be drawn despite White's extra pawn due to the opposite colored bishops.

18...Bxf3! 19.gxf3 Qf4 20.Rxd6

The other way to prevent Black from playing 20...Qh2 checkmate is 20.Qxf7+ Qxf7 21.Bxf7+ Kxf7 Stockfish likes Black's position to the tune of -4.5, but it looks like there is a lot of work for Black to do before claiming the point. Black has the wrong rook pawn for the dark-squared bishop, so either Stockfish has high hopes for the g-pawn or is hoping to tie White down by aiming all Black's pieces at the pawn on f2 and then picking off whatever loose pawns it can find.

20...Rxd6

Black's extra exchange and White's broken kingside pawns support Stockfish's assessment of an overwhelming Black advantage. But there is no immediate mate, so White has reasons for hope. His attack on Black's f7-square ties Black down. And though White's connected passed pawns on the queenside are no immediate threat, if he can ever get them rolling...

Position after 26.Kh2

26...Qe5+

Black has plenty of moves that do not spoil his advantage, but not many moves that make progress, and most of them seem require aiming toward magical computer piece arrangements. If you don't believe in magical computer piece arrangements, you can save time by skipping the following analysis. One magical piece arrangement example is 26...Rf8. Normally you don't want rooks playing defense—they are great attackers and less than ideal defenders. But the f7 pawn needs all the help it can get. 27.Rd1 Qf3 28.Rd2 (Alternatively, defending the pawn with 28.Rf1 leads to the loss of the b-pawn after 28...Qe2 29.Qd1 Qxb2) 28...Rxb3+ 29.Qxb3 Qf4+ 30.Kg2 Qxd2 makes progress, as the only way White can defend his b-pawn is to break up the connected passed pawns. 31.Qc3 Qxc3 32.bxc3

27.Kh1 Re7 28.Qd8+ Re8 29.Qd7 Rf6 30.f3 Qe2 31.Bc4 Qe7?

We are taught to trade pieces when we are up material. But in this case, removing the queens means that White's broken kingside pawn shelter is no longer a defensive problem. This allows White's connected passed pawns on the queenside to come into their own. Black is still better, but White now has clear reasons for hope. For Ted Lasso fans, this is a time to Believe, not the time for "It's the hope that kills you."

32.Qxe7 Rxe7 33.Rf2 g5

I mentioned earlier my belief that Rooks are great attackers but less than ideal defenders. So I support Black's attempt to mount an attack. Stockfish prefers trying to slow down White's queenside pawns with 33...Ra7 34.b3 Ra3 This seems defensive to me, but perhaps I should view it as an attack on the a2 pawn, combining attack with defense.

34.b3 Re3 35.Kg2 h5 36.a4 Kg7

The last chance to slow down White's queenside pawns is 36...Rf5!♣ 37.b4 (if White tries to pass with a move that maintains the status quo like 37.Kg3 Kg7 38.Kg2 h4 39.Rf1 Kf6 40.Rf2 Rc3 41.Rf1 Ke7 42.Re1+ Kd6 43.Rf1) 37...Rf4 and White gets to choose whether Black will win a pawn a pawn on b4 or f3 38.Rc2 (38.Bd5 Rxb4) 38...Rxf3.

Will Nobles (1710) – Alexander Uan-Zo-Li (1773) [C79]

[Wilson Gibbins]

1.e4 e5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.Bb5 a6 4.Ba4 Nf6 5.0-0 d6 6.Re1 Bg4

In the Ruy Lopez, White often plays h2–h3 to prevent this pin before advancing pawns in the center with c2–c3 and d2–d4. What happens if Black pins this knight before White prevents it? Will demonstrate that White how to get the central pawns rolling even when they are inhibited by a pin on the f3 knight.

7.c3

First, Will stops 7...Nc6–d4 which would intensify pressure on the pinned knight. And the pawn on c3 will eventually support the d2–d4 pawn push, it will just come a little later than it usually does in the Ruy Lopez. Some the Ruy requires a little patience.

7...b5 8.Bc2 Be7 9.d3

It appears that White will lose time by taking two moves to get his pawn to d4. But he will gain some time by attacking Black's light squared bishop, so it will turn out fine in the end.

9...h6 10.Nbd2

When I played the Ruy it took a lot of faith for me to believe these positions were good for White. Black appears to have more pieces developed than White, partly because White's bishop on c1 is going nowhere fast. But it usually is reasonably well placed on c1. And the rook on a1 isn't undeveloped, it is there to assist an a2–a4 pawn push. Development means getting your pieces to good squares—if they are already on good squares, you are under no obligation to move them.

10...0-0 11.h3

White now gets this standard Ruy move for free.

11...Bh5 12.Nf1 Nh7 13.Ng3

This typical Ruy maneuver gains additional time by attacking the bishop on h5.

13...Bg6 14.d4

White gets a normal Ruy position. Even though it took a little longer to get there, it all turned out well in the end. White has a solid though not yet winning advantage.

14...Bf6 15.d5 Ne7 16.h4!?

White has other good moves, but this one creates some kingside action. 16.a4 is also good, though not better than what White played.

21.Kg2 Rh8 22.Rh1 Kg8 23.Qg4 Bxh5 24.Rxh5 Rxh5 25.Qxh5

Position after 25.Qxh5

White will need to shift some pieces to the kingside for an ongoing attack, but his well-placed queen and the open h-file means that Black will have a difficult defense.

25...Kf8 26.Be3 Ne7 27.f4 Ng6

Stockfish says 27...exf4± is a better defensive try, but I would be reluctant to relinquish my e5 strong-point and open lines around my king. Black's e5-pawn is keeping White's bishop on c2 from contributing.

28.f5 Ne7 29.g4 Ng8 30.g5 Be7 31.g6 Nf6 32.Qh8+ Ng8 33.Rf1 f6

It is tempting to try to lock the position as much as possible, but Black needs the f6-square for his bishop to defend the pawn on g7.

34.Rh1! Qd7 35.Rh7! Bd8 36.Bh6!

You don't need to see the mate in seven that Stockfish announces to understand the carnage that is about to occur on g7.

2022 Washington Challenger's Cup

Josh Sinanan

The 2022 Washington Challenger's Cup was held November 4-6 at the Orlov Chess Academies in Seattle and Redmond. Though typically held in late October, the event was pushed out to early November to avoid a conflict with the SPFNO, which WCF co-hosted. The Open and Reserve sections were held at separate locations due to space limitations of the venues, with the Open section taking place in Seattle and the Reserve U1700 section in Redmond.

As is the tradition for this event, the highest-finishing Washington State resident in the Open section seeds directly into the Championship section of the 2023 Washington State Championship, which is set to take place in Redmond in February. The seed into the State Championship, along with the Open section being FIDE rated, typically attracts many strong players, seeking the coveted seed or just in search of a strong FIDE-rated tournament hosted locally.

Despite these attractive features, only two masters showed up for the Open section, FM Tian Sang and NM Viktors Pupols. Chess players from throughout Washington State were represented in the 50-player field, including the cities of Redmond, Kent, Seattle, Bothell, Bellevue, Olympia, Snoqualmie, Brier, Sammamish, Duvall, Woodinville, Kingston, Mercer Island, Fall City, and Medina! The tournament was hosted by the Washington Chess Federation and directed by the man, the myth, the legendary Senior Tournament Director Fred Kleist (Open section) and Scholastic Chess Coach/Director Extraordinaire Lane Van Weerdhuizen (Reserve section).

FIDE Master Tian Sang, a researcher based in Redmond and working at Apple, emerged victorious in the Open section with a perfect five points from five games! Sang, who was once a top-ranked junior when he lived in China, registered on a whim at the last minute and broke his two-year hiatus from competitive play. His key matchup came in the third round, when he was paired against soon-to-be-master Brandon Jiang, rated 2175, of Bellevue. Sang finished strong with wins against Seattle chess wizard Akiva Notkin and recent British Columbia transplant David Zhou of Seattle. Four players shared second/third/U2100/U1900 honors a point and a half back with 3.5 points apiece: Ted Wang of Medina, Luca Tessiere of Seattle, Vihaan Jammalamadaka of Redmond, and Akiva Notkin of Seattle. Notkin also won the Best Upset prize for his last-round victory against the legendary Northwest Master "Unkel" Vik Pupols. Needless to say, Akiva is grossly underrated at only 1251 US Chess, and is a force to be reckoned with at the board!

In the Reserve U1700 section, two third graders from the Eastside, Aaron Ren and Yuchen Zhou, dominated the field, each scoring an undefeated four points from five games! Aaron Ren, an Enatai Elementary student based in Bellevue, won his first three games in a row before drawing with Darsh Verma and Co-Champion Zhou in the final two rounds. Yuchen Zhou, a Cherry Crest Elementary student based in Bellevue, also drew with Ren and Verma, and managed to score a clutch fourth round win against fellow third grade phenom Dann Merriman on his way to the Co-Championship title.

According to the Reserve U1700 TD Lane Van Weerdhuizen, the pace of play was crisp and expedient, with an entire round managing to finish in only ten minutes despite the time control of game in ninety minutes with a thirty-second increment! Four up-and-coming juniors tied for third place a half-point back with 3.5 points: Odbayar Yondon of Redmond, Darsh Verma of Bothell, Arnab Gadde of Redmond, and Vijay Nallappa of Redmond. Amana Demberel, a tenth grader from Lincoln High School based in Seattle, claimed first U1500 honors by virtue of having the same score as the third place finishers. Snoqualmie Middle School chess stud William Cummins and third grade Ella Baker Elementary student Aakash Mishra rounded out the prize winners by sharing first U1300/U1100 honors with three points apiece. Mishra also won the Best Upset prize for his last round victory against a player rated more than five hundred points above him. Congratulations to the winners, and many thanks to all who contributed to this fantastic event!

1.c4 Nf6

This was a fascinating game in the English Opening and both sides had many different chances. Although Black took the advantage pretty early on, there are lots of hidden tactical and strategic ideas. This was a marathon of a game, lasting around three hours, and a crucial win for me in the tournament.

2.Nc3 e6 3.g3 d5 4.cxd5?!

This already gave me a pretty easy game, as it allowed for a strong d5 and c6 pawn center. It also helped me play against the English bishop.

4...exd5 5.d4 e6 6.Bg2 Bf5 7.Nf3 Bd6 8.Nh4!?

This was a surprise from my opponent, as I had been thinking about 0-0 or possible Qb3 variations. I did not want to give up the light-squared bishop, even though preserving it would not allow me to maintain my grasp of the critical e4 square.

Kai Pisan.

8...Be6 9.0-0 Qc8?!

The engine dislikes this move, but in the game, I thought it was an interesting plan because I could play both ...Nbd7 and prepare to trade off the light-squared bishops. I was also worried about possible f4 ideas and my bishop having to be evacuated from e6.

10.Bg5 Nbd7 11.f4?!

Over the board I did not think this move was good because I could simply play h6 and get the bishop for the knight; it also weakened White's king on the g1 to a7 diagonal.

11...h6 12.Bxf6 Nxf6 13.f5 Bd7 14.e4!

White took an aggressive strategy because Black's king was still in the center. It looked quite dangerous for me to short castle, so I decided to opt for moving my king queenside, after dealing with the center tension.

14...dxe4 15.Nxe4 Nxe4 16.Bxe4 Qc7 17.b4?!

Another aggressive ploy by White to keep Black's king exposed. On closer inspection however, it simply gave away a pawn. Although grabbing it immediately is not one of the engine's top choices, it still gave Black many practical chances if the king could be brought to safety.

17...Bxb4 18.Kh1??

An odd choice, especially since White needed to play actively as they were a pawn down. Better would have been Qb3 or Rb1.

18...0-0-0 19.Rb1 Ba5 20.Rf2?!

Black is now winning since White's pieces are in disarray and White is down material. This plan of Rf2, although a smart way to stack the rooks, is not fast enough for the position's needs.

20...Rhe8 21.Qf3 Bb6 22.Rfb2

Position after 22.Rfb2

22...Bxd4

A critical decision point here. If Black did not take on d4, then d5 and the light squares around Black's king being weakened would be constantly looming. On the other hand, even then I knew that taking on d4 would lead to a long, complicated, drawn-out ending of two rooks versus the queen. In hindsight,

...Qd6 or ...Kb8 might have been better, although I think simplifying the position down makes it easier to play.

23.Rxb7 Qxb7 24.Rxb7 Kxb7 25.Ng2 Re7 26.Qd3 Bb6 27.a4??

White finally gave way to the pressure and blundered a discovery. This led to an even more winning endgame for Black, with two rooks and a bishop versus a queen. It is also a nice tactical motif.

27...Bxf5! 28.Bxc6+ Kxc6 29.Qb5+ Kb7 30.Qxf5 Rd1+ 31.Ne1 Rdx1+ 32.Kg2 R1e5 33.Qf3+

Here I was perplexed by how to get my king safe, but saw that if I somehow got it to g8, my wall of pawns would be enough protection.

33...Kc7 34.Qf4 Kd8 35.Qf3 f6 36.Qb3 R7e6 37.Kh3 Ke7 38.Kh4 Kf8 39.a5!

I saw this move, although I deemed it not dangerous because my rooks were protecting my bishop and my king was no longer at risk. However, it is White's best option.

39...Bxa5 40.Qb8+ Kf7 41.Qxa7+ Re7 42.Qa6 g6 43.Kh3 Kg7

With the problem of my king out of the way, I could finally go on the offensive and maneuver my pieces to their optimal squares.

44.Kh4 Bd2 45.Kg4 h5+ 46.Kh3 g5 47.Qd3 Re2!

A beautiful zugzwang. I still had to calculate it carefully, however, as stalemate traps such as Qh7!! could have worked if White had not had a g-pawn. This also forces the winning of White's queen because of the encroaching ...g4+, ...Rh2 checkmate threat.
